Hawes Admits He Loves Girl He Jilted and Wife

TORTURED, HE SAYS, BY DESIRE FOR BOTH

Two Women, Each Loving Him, Are Waiting for Victory of One or the Other

By MARGERY LEE

Pure love and mad infatuation are waging battle in the heart of a man.

Two women, each loving him in her own way, are waiting for the victory of one or the other.

The man is Edgar Hawes, chief engineer of Hood's Ice Cream Factory. One woman is Mrs. Helen Hawes, who was divorced from her husband three years ago, and whom he re-married on September 23, last. The other woman is Mrs. Grace Crocker of Cambridge, his jilted fiancee, whom he declares he worships with an all-consuming passion.

"I love them both, and I have nearly killed them both with my blundering love. It is a wretched affair," said Edgar Hawes to a reporter of the Boston American. Hawes lives at No. 1118 Massachusetts avenue. Although he has seen his former fiancee every day since, he could not bear to tell her he had

BIANCO IN PLEA, NEAR COLLAPSE

Alleged Black Hand Slayer of Simboli Totters as He Weakly Says "Not Guilty!"

But Tony looked anything but the ruthless part when arraigned in East Boston Court today.

He could hardly keep on his feet. He trembled. He fairly tottered as he stood up to plead "not guilty" in quavering tones. His nerve was gone.

Tony's glance fell upon a dark-eyed woman who had come into court just as he was being arraigned. He was more affected than ever. The woman is his wife.

Before being started off for Charles street jail, where he will be held without bail, Tony begged to see his seven children. But he was told "not just now."

SLASHED TO DEATH.

The police, however, accuse Tony of being one of three men who cut and slashed Joe Simboli to death in a murder brutal even for Black Hand methods.

Steffano Militello of Shelby street, East Boston, was arrested last Saturday night, about twelve hours after the murder. The police say that he admits that he drove the car in which Simboli's body was taken to Orient Heights, but denies that he had any part in the killing.

Militello, according to the police, is only a roving character, and may not have been close to Simboli.

GRUESOME PRACTICE.

But Tony iBanco was regarded as a friend of iSmboli, making the grim charge against him all the more impressive. Detectives who have followed the devious and deadly methods of the Black Hand assert that it is a gruesome practice of that band after it has marked a man for death, to compel someone who had been close to him, to carry out the punishment.

Score of Others in Panic When Wall of the Building Collapses

One man was fatally injured, three others less seriously, and scores thrown into panic when a two-ton machine being hoisted to the fifth floor of No. 24 Canal street, fell to the ground today.

James McDonnell of No. 328 A Parker street, Charlestown, was struck by bricks and parts of the broken machinery, and the doctors at the Relief Station said he had little chance for life.

Desroche Fidele of No. 8 Parker street, Charlestown, Yacubian Lazon of No. 23 Day street, Somerville, and Bernard Aldenberg of No. 125 Sheridan avenue, Medford, are in a critical condition at the hospital but will recover.

In addition, two women, several children, and two men were taken to the hospital after they had been severely mauled by the panic-stricken crowd in the mad dash to escape the scene of destruction.

McDonell and Fidele were employed by the C. L. York Company, which was moving the machine. The others injured were passersby.

The tackle had been fixed on the fifth floor, and the machine had just begun to rise, when the brick wall on the front of the building collapsed. Immediately the heavy machine fell and many in the crowd below thought that the whole wall was about to topple over on them.

BEAUTY WINNER WINS SUPPORT FOR CHILD

Haverhill, Oct. 7.—A non-support charge which Mrs. Ethel Kendell Towne of Worcester has brought against her husband, Sidney Towne of this city, was dismissed today in police court when he promised to support his young child.

Mrs. Towne won a loving cup a few years ago at a big ball in this city, being declared the most beautiful girl in attendance. The cup was presented by Mayor Flanders who was one of the judges.

The couple eloped and were married at West Newbury in January, 1921, after Towne had been arrested following charges of 17-year-old Hortense Gould of Salisbury, who said he was the father of her young child.

BUSH LAST HOPE OF YANKS

New York Fandom Look for Four Straight for Giants After Scott's Victory

Polo Grounds, Oct. 7.—At 1 o'clock today arrangements were being made to play the fourth game of the world's series this afternoon. This was in spite of misty and threatening weather. Rain, which started during the forenoon, has stopped at this time.

By NICK FLATLEY

New York, Oct. 7. — Miller Huggins peered into the pit of disaster today. His only ray of hope was that a drizzle of rain which fell during the forenoon would prevent today's game. The Yankees are groggy, and one more wallop will knock them for a book of losers' checks.

McGraw has produced fine pitching. His so-called weakling staff has responded to urge of the big crisis. The American Leaguers are wondering why his pitchers had such a tough season. They have not seen a Giant chucker yet who could

England, Like U. S., May Mind Own Business at Home, Says Bonar Law

London, Oct. 7 (By the Associated Press).—A sensation has been caused by a letter from Andrew Bonar Law, Unionist leader in the House of Commons, upholding the British government's attitude in the Near Eastern crisis, and given conspicuous publicity in all London newspapers today.

The pronouncement is widely held to be equivalent to a direct threat to withdraw the British troops from the Rhine and completely terminate the entente unless France comes into line with the British policy in the Near East.

Bonar Law's position as potential head of a potential conservative government in the near future and his intimate relations with several of the present Cabinet ministers are regarded as giving his view special weight.

About 1,000 Newspaper Men

They Represent Disappointment—and Other Things

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

Gene Fowler, a first-class newspaper worker and editor of "The Club Reporter," published by the Newspaper Club of New York city, wants an editorial for his paper.

Said he: "We have more than 1,000 members in our club. They are our only subscribers. Please write an editorial about "one thousand newspaper men."

A thousand newspaper men represent, among other things, disappointment in life. Newspaper work is hard, and it does not get better as you grow older, unless you are among the few very fortunate.

Men in other professions, as they work through the years, build up a firm name professionally or in business they build up a business name. And at the end of years they have created something that GOES ON earning for them when they are old.

Not so with the newspaper man.

He must do every day the work by which he lives, and do it all over again.

Each day he must create his reputation anew.

His greatest asset is ENTHUSIASM, real interest in what he sees and what he tells.

And the years are the enemies of enthusiasm.

A thousand newspapermen, however, represent something more important than several hundred kinds of disappointment. They are to our civilization what the bulb in the electric lamp is to the big factory grinding out electricity down by the waterfront. The light in the bulb tells what the factory is doing. The reporter in the newspaper tells what civilization is doing, as it works, builds, tears down, cheats, lies, deceives and SLOWLY GOES AHEAD.

The electric bulb BURNS OUT, so does the newspaper man. He at least has made it possible for humanity to see more clearly and to advance with knowledge. That means satisfaction.

Newspaper work brings disillusion. After a few years a man starting out full of enthusiasm knows too much about human beings. He must begin with a great supply of hope and optimism, and with a good deal of knowledge of the past and of progress in the past to avoid pessimism and gloom.

Young reporters learn that the word of great men is often unreliable. One of the best known statesmen and heroes of this country always had two reporters sent to see him by the Associated Press, that one might corroborate the other and discourage denial of what the hero had actually said.

Reporters in the very beginning learn the pitiful craving for notoriety, eagerness for publicity that obsesses their fellow citizens and that diminishes their opinion of them.

Reporters learn quite young that politics and the government of this nation are managed to a great extent by the intellectual dregs of the population. They discover that the first step toward public approval is a step down, and that discourages them.

However, newspaper work is an education. It enlightens the reporter as the reporter enlightens his fellow citizens. If he can stay out of the rut, which is extremely difficult and unusual, or if he can stay in long enough to get the information he wants, then get out and try something else, the reporter usually can thank his newspaper experience.

If he stays too long and is not exceptionally fortunate, time and the current of news running through him burn him out, as the electric current burns out the bulb, and like that bulb he goes into the scrap heap.

This is written after thirty-nine years of reporting and other newspaper work, and therefore with some slight authority.

Without the work of good reporters our government, our grafters, our hypocrites, big and little, our crooks in politics, and our politics in crime would be a thousand times worse than they are. Let that repay the 1,000 newspaper men.

Let Superior Officers Act

Policeman Accused of Attacking Boston American Office Boy Condemned by Court—Boy Is Freed

Recently a Boston American messenger boy was on his way to deliver copy when he became mingled in a crowd which was watching the arrest of a drunken would-be orator. He claims that a few moments afterwards a new officer entered the situation and ordered the crowd back, striking without reason the Boston American's messenger boy and later arresting him on the charge of attempting to free a prisoner.

The story which the officer told and the story which the boy told were so conflicting and irreconcilable that the Boston American decided to find some other witnesses to the affair. We therefore published the facts so far as we have already stated them and declaring that we wished to stand by our boy if he was right and to stand by the officer if he was right. So we asked the spectators who might read the editorial to send their names and addresses to us. Quite a number put duty above convenience and sent us their names and addresses. On interviewing these spectators we found that they corroborated our boy and not the officer, so we defended the boy in court, and the court acquitted him and thus condemned the conduct of the officer.

Now what should be done to the officer we do not know. We are not in the business of disciplining the police force. We are entirely willing that the matter should be attended to by their officers' superiors. We are contented to call the attention of the superiors to the incident and let it rest there. It is not necessary to assure the police force that the Boston American is not a captious or a hostile critic. They know that this newspaper has defended the police force against a great many unjust attacks and has always taken the position that the severest punishment must be given those citizens who resist an officer or to those who assault an officer. But the most friendly kind of criticism is that which helps to weed out or to chasten the hot-headed or mean-minded officer.

Should She Work?

Editor Boston American:

I am a woman of twenty-five and have been married three years. I have one daughter. Now that the family is increased my husband's pay is not sufficient to support us in what I consider comfortable circumstances. Should I go to work? I was an expert stenographer and could earn good money. It is not independence I want, but more comforts in the home. My husband does not want me to, and I myself feel that I might be taking a job from some needy single woman. Who can help me in my quandary?

Subway Courtesy

Editor Boston American:

As I received change for a half-dollar at a booth in the Park street subway the other day, the woman inside changed the sign over the window from "Open" to "Closed." The sign in turning over struck me on the head. I was not hurt, but a dime was knocked to the ground from my hand. In my confusion I did not notice it, and held out my hand to show the woman that I was ten cents short. "Move along," she said. "If you want your dime, you will find it on the floor!" Courtesy! What?

Having read in the Seen and Heard Column about a paper printed April 15, 1865, on view in a Charlestown store window, I thought you might be interested to know that I have a copy of the New York Herald of the same date (April 15, 1865), the first page also being devoted to the assassination of President Lincoln, and I have another paper, Ulster County Gazette, printed at Kingston, Ulster County, N. Y., Saturday, January 4, 1800, giving an account of the death of Washington.

Political Prisoners

Editor Boston American:

Since much of the hatred that our countrymen felt for Germany and the Kaiser, William, has died out, why should the political prisoners be kept in prison. I am afraid that the "old" Kaiser, as he has oftentimes been called, is not the only man who was shown a cold and unforgiving spirit. These men are not murderers nor thieves, but most of them, and perhaps all, have as big and as true hearts as ever beat in the breast of any man. Will the government be doing duty to these fathers and husbands who are sorely needed at home? Are these men the only ones who are suffering and being punished? What about the children and mothers who are longing each day to receive news, glad news, from these men who most of us believe have been sufficiently punished for the mistake that they made—many months ago—but years it must have seemed to them? More Such Women

Editor Boston American:

I would say, Miss L. E. V., yours is not a small personal problem. We want more such women as you to be the mothers of our boys. Permit me to say you talk like an American queen and I have not the least doubt but you have picked an American prince. Don't look into the future with only gold in the eye. Remember there's one thing much greater, contentment. How many who live in grand mansions glittering with gold lack contentment. I feel full sure one dollar living happy together will go farther than ten. Your fiance is correct, for too many of our young women are foolishly independent. Once you look your little one in the face and it reflects your own likeness, I'll say such as you are capable of moving mountains, so go to it for the love of your dear country and may God bless you. A FRIEND.

Proud of Button

Editor Boston American:

I wonder how any one can be so bigoted to object to any one wearing an emblem which plainly reads, "For Service at the Front," even though it has the Union Jack in the centre? There were 107,000 Americans as good as "Unhyphenated American" in the Canadian army who got there early to "make the world safe for democracy" and history shows that the Canadian army has a splendid record "over there." I am from Greater Boston and just as good an American as the writer of said article, spent the biggest part of four years in the Canadian army, twenty-seven months' actual service at the front and have been wounded three times, and am only one of the many Americans who are proud to wear a service emblem earned in the last war, whether it has the English, French, Italian or any other flag of a country who was our ally. Another fact about the button is that the wearer did not have to fight for his bonus.

HENRY MORRISON.

Machinist's Mate, 1st Class, U. S. Navy.

Stars and Stripes Only

Editor Boston American:

In answer to the individual signing self H. M. W., Hudson, I would say the slur to Americans is given by the wearers of this "wonderful button," with the Union Jack of England engraved on it. The Americans saved this emblem of tyranny from utter defeat and yet these fellows have the audacity to wear it in our streets. I work with Canadians and they have no use for this Republic, only for the good living they can make here. I again say to my fellow American citizens, that no emblem, however "wonderful," should be allowed to be paraded day after day in our streets, before our eyes, except the Stars and Stripes.

AN UNHYPHENATED AMERICAN.

Canadian Button

Editor Boston American:

"Unhyphenated American" doesn't seem to understand the meaning of the little bronze button, with a Union Jack, encircled by the words, "For Service at the Front," worn by thousands of ex-service men in the United States. Does "Unhyphenated American" (whatever that means) fear that the wearing of such an honorable decoration makes the wearer a less desirable citizen? Like thousands of others in the United States I am no less proud of my American birth and citizenship than I am of the honor I had of fighting with the Canadian boys.

We joined the Canadian army because we realized long before our "watchful waiting administration" that it was America's fight, and we felt ashamed of our country's delay until her bankers and other capitalists could corner the gold of the world.

Will Get His Crutches

Editor Boston American:

I know a young fellow who is badly crippled and in need of crutches. Would like to know if Mrs. A. J. R. still has the pair which measures 45 inches. If so, I know this young man would appreciate them very much as he is very poor and out of work.

MRS. F. A. H.

ED NOTE—The address of Mrs. A. J. R. who offered the 45-inch crutches has been sent to Mrs. F. A. H.

If This Is Your Birthday

You Are LUCKY

YOU are extremely emotional if born today, and rather inclined to overdo everything you attempt. You are impulsive, erratic, and you can never rely on yourself any more than others can rely on you, because your mind is so clear in its perceptions that any problem you experience becomes momentarily of great importance. You see it in all its complicated relations to other things and you feel that you personally must do something to solve it.

Today is one of auspicious outlook for general business, and of particularly splendid prospect for all chemical industries.

The next year of your life will be one of restful quiet and meditation—a year in which you will develop spiritually and philosophically in order to face the future.

A child born today will be forceful and magnetic and will always have the happy faculty of securing the loyalty and services of others.

IS YOUR DRAMATIC SENSE PERVERTED?

It is a rather good thing to have a keen dramatic sense if it causes you to realize that wherever you do, you must play your part well while you are on earth.

In fact there are some persons who help themselves over hard places in life, just through their ability to look at the troubles of the day as from the outside, and to dictate to themselves the right sort of action.

But when the dramatic sense leads a person to play up everything for its effect on someone else, then the dramatic sense is perverted.

If your first thought is, what would the crowd say if I shall do so and so? you are bordering on a dangerous kind of dramatics.

If you want applause at any cost, you are not really true and sincere.

Real, not assumed, sincerity is the greatest charm a person can possess.

Just let it be suspected once that you are acting a part, and are not truly what you pretend by your fair words or your acts, and you have lost your greatest asset, whether in business or society.

SEEN AND HEARD

THE most famous herd of Guernsey cows in the country is on the MIXTER estate in Hardwick. It numbers 850. Such careful care is shown in breeding that not a communicable disease has been found in the herd in twenty years.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL ALLEN kept in shape during the Tufts and Pelletier case by playing tennis daily. He recently got a chariey horse, so he now chops wood an hour every morning before leaving his home for the office.

SENATOR DAVID I. WALSH is both a genial and witty presiding officer. At the Democratic State Convention he introduced COLONEL GASTON as "the next junior Senator from Massachusetts."

While JERRY WATSON was scanning Webster's Dictionary for British propaganda he encountered the word "zarf." Imagine his surprise when he read the definitions "A metallic cup-like stand for a finjan"? He is waiting to get over his start before he looks up the meaning of finjan.

Persons accustomed to seeing wild crows in the country districts would be surprised to see how tame these birds become in a big city, where they seem to understand they have no gunnery to fear. Just at this time a flock of them can be seen almost any time in the vicinity of Norfolk Hall, Dorchester. They mingle with the pigeons in friendly fashion and sun themselves unconcernedly on the roof of the big hall.

DEPUTY PARK COMMISSIONER WILLIAM P. LONG is back on the job at his Roscoe Hill office somewhat crippled. The D. P. C. slipped on the concrete in his garage recently and is sporting a nice new pair of crutches.

The new concrete bleachers on the old Town Field, Dorchester, are at last visible to the naked eye, and the finished section resembles a small corner of the Harvard Stadium. It is a fine monument to the ceaseless efforts of COUNCILLOR GILSODY.

ERNEST H. WILSON, assistant director of the Arnold Arboretum, who has just returned from a world tour in the interests of the great Forest Hills institution, is in time to pluck one of the many fruits of his labors in far away Thibet. It was there that dr. Wilson found and brought to Boston the first stoneless peach ever known to the civilized world.

SAM SMITH, who referees most of the big wrestling bouts in this section, was an instructor in this art during the war. He was a color sergeant in the 3rd Pioneer Infantry (old 5th Mass.) and while in the South taught army officers half Nelsons, etc.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON FULLNESS OF LIFE

By Garrett P. Serviss

EVERY healthy human being wishes to, and ought to, make the most possible of his life. It is his duty and will certainly, if he obeys that duty, be his pleasure, to fill his life full to its capacity. But this can never be done by idleness of mind or body or both. Nothing pays but discipline. The listless joys of idle hours are too soft. They have no gemlike quality. They give no lasting satisfaction. Only by his work a man attains his highest excellence.

Work does not mean simply the occupation by which one earns his living. It signifies equally any exercise of his powers by means of which he learns more about himself and the things around him. I call it work to watch intelligently and experiment ingeniously with the phenomena of nature, seeking both to understand them better and to appreciate to the full all the beauty and marvelousness that they contain.

Both that kind of work and the kind that directly earns daily bread, by tiring, monotonous, continuance of muscular and nervous effort, contribute together and alike to the filling out of one's life.

What is it to fill out your life? It is simply to develop yourself on every side; to make of yourself as complete a human creature as you can; to get away as far as possible from mere animality. You will hear people praise the "idyllic" life of the South Sea islands. There nature, they say, is so kind a nurse, or so indulgent a mother, that men and women have only to stretch forth their hands in order to have, with no effort, the wherewithal to live; there they need not clothe themselves; there forests and groves form houses not made with hands; there there is no need to cultivate the ground; there all may lie or stroll all day and every day in golden sunshine, or in the cooling shadows of white, wind-driven clouds, or of green branches stirred by fragrant zephyrs: there, in one sentence, men and women may have the freedom, the irresponsibility, the thoughtlessness, the carelessness, the ignorance, the irrationality of the beasts of the field, throwing away, or utterly disregarding all the mobility of human nature, the only thing that enables man to differentiate himself from the other animals.

And this sort of life is held up for us to admire, and we are told that our civilization, is a failure because it has drifted away from this delightful "simple freedom" into the "slavery" of the working world. But work, after all slavery, if men understand it right. Modern civilization is not a failure simply because injustice, inequity, predatory greed, oppression of the weak, heartlessness, selfishness and other crimes and outrages flourish under it like weeds in a rich soil.

The person who develops himself, or herself, to the utmost becomes a kind of human star, or sun, radiating from an almost exhaustless store, energies that tend to the welfare of those in hundreds of thousands of others. We have all felt the influence of persons possessing this fullness. They are springs or reservoirs of force, because they have, during all their life, kept their minds open to the inflow of the suggestions and influences of nature, without being mere conduits, but always digesting, interpreting and giving new force to what they have received.

—Medbury Says—

A Dame Doesn't Care How Much You Walk Her in a Dance if There's a Taxi at the End

Fast and jazzy dancing has gone and slow dancing has taken its place. But the way some couples creep over the dance floor you'd think they'd be arrested for vagrancy.

One up-to-date cafe put a revolving floor in their restaurant to save the dancers the trouble of doing any walking at all. A guy gets up on the dance floor with his girl. She put her head on his shoulder and the next thing he knows she's asleep.

The men are just as bad as the girls and in many of these he-flappers look it's hard to tell when they're unconscious.

You don't know whether to wake them up or bury them. Some of the dance halls have had to put a "no loafing" signs on their floors.

No matter how soundly she sleeps on the dance floor you can always wake her up by telling her you're going to take her home on the street car.

But it's a pleasure to take them to a dance, because most of them can walk in their sleep.

It's getting so now that when you see a couple awake on the dance floor you know they're suffering from insomnia.

The business districts of most towns are getting so noisy that a person can't sleep at the office any more.

Of course everybody has a home, but a lot of us sleep there by proxy.

The styles of dancing have changed, but we have the orchestras. Instead of playing wide awake selections they play "Rock-a-bye," and "Sleep, Baby Sleep."

The orchestras are getting so lazy that they only play pieces which have a lot of "rests" in them. And most of them choose dance selections which are composed of half notes.

The dancers and the orchestra have a lot of fun with each other. They each try to see which can get to sleep first.

If this style of dancing continues, the men will have to sell their watches and carry alarm clocks.

BRITISH THREATEN TO WITHDRAW THEIR TROOPS FROM THE RHINE

WARNING BY BONAR LAW

Lloyd George and Colonial Secretary Churchill had something more than mere previous knowledge of the launching of this utterance at the moment of Foreign Secretary Curzon's mission to Paris.

"We are at the Straits and Constantinople," says the letter, "not by our own action alone, but by the will of the allied powers which won the war, and America is one of those powers.

"We cannot alone act as the policeman of the world. . . . Our duty will be to say plainly to France that if she is not prepared to support us we shall be unable to bear the burden alone, but we shall have no alternative except to initiate the government of the United States and restrict our attention to safeguarding the more immediate interests of the empire."

Allies Agree on Terms to Turks

Paris, Oct. 7. (By the Associated Press).—Great Britain and France, as represented by Foreign Secretary Curzon and Premier Poincare, have agreed in principle that the troops of the Turkish Nationalists shall be allowed to occupy Eastern Thrace only after the conclusion of a peace treaty.

The solution agreed upon provides three steps for the return of Thrace to the Turks, as follows:

First, the Greek army and those of the population desiring to leave must evacuate immediately.

Second, a Turkish civil administration will be installed at the same time the allied troops take the place of the Greek forces to preserve order.

Third, the Turkish army will be allowed to cross the straits of the Dardanelles and enter Thrace only upon conclusion of a peace treaty, and it will not be until that time that eastern Thrace is completely restored to Turkey.

Moscow Reports Sultan Abdicates

London, Oct. 7 (By the Associated Press).—A report that Sultan Mohammed VI. of Turkey has abdicated was received early this afternoon by the Russian delegation here in a wireless dispatch from Moscow. There is no confirmation of the report, but Moscow is believed to be in close communication with Constantinople and Angora.

The Moscow dispatch, which recounted a message from Angora, says that upon his abdication the Sultan named as his successor his cousin, Abdul Medjid Effendi, who will be known as Medjid II.

'Keep Out of War!" Says Sir Joseph Wedgewood

New York, Oct. 7.—Opposing a war to guarantee the integrity of the Dardanelles, Sir Josiah Wedgewood, M. P., distinguished world war veteran and vice-chairman of the British Labor party, arrived today on the Carmania, to participate in the campaign to finance the development of Palestine as a Jewish homeland.

Sir Josiah declared that the labor elements of Great Britain, as well as the Liberals, was "quite fed up" with war.

"I believe that we should take the view of the Near East that America has, and keep out of it if it needs tates fighting and losing lives," he said.

"Labor is interested in preserving the freedom of the straits, but more interested in peace. We cannot afford any more wars, even to save Christians from massacre."

Kemal Pasha Going Soon to Mudania

London, Oct. 7.—Fethi Bey, Turkish Nationalist Minister of the Interior, and Kiazim Pasha, Minister of Defense, have arrived at Mudania in response to a summons from Ismet Pasha, Turkish delegate to the Armistice Conference, according to a Reuters dispatch from Constantinople.

The Turkish newspapers announce that Mustapha Kemal Pasha left Angora on Thursday to visit the reconquered territories, and that he also is going to Mudania, where he hopes to meet the British commander, Brigadier-General Harington.

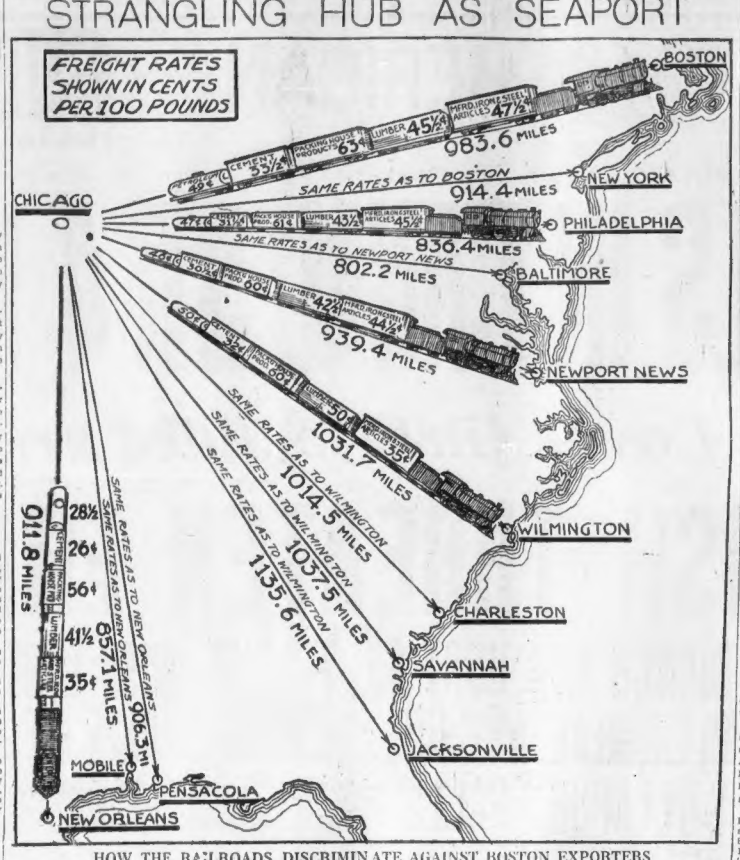
10,000 Greek Troops in French Thracian Area

London, Oct. 7.—Greek troops to the number of 10,000 have been concentrated in the Tchataldja district, eastern Thrace, which is under control of French cavalry, says a Central News dispatch.

Greek officers are reported to have distributed arms to some of the population of Thrace, adds the message, telling them to repulse the Turks.

Fires have broken out in the forest of Istrangja, north of Constantinople, and are spreading in the direction of the Bosphorus.

STRANGLING HUB AS SEAPORT



HOW THE RAILROADS DISCRIMINATE AGAINST BOSTON EXPORTERS

The above map graphically illustrates the discrimination practiced by the railroads against Boston exporters. On every type of commodity shipped from Chicago to the various Eastern and Southern seaports, the rate to Boston is higher than to any other port, with the exception of New York. Petroleum products from Chicago to Boston or New York, for instance, pay a rate of 49 cents per hundredweight. But they can be sent from Chicago to New Orleans, practically the same distance, for 28½ cents. Similar conditions, as can be seen from the key in the above map, prevail in other commodities.

Pope Appeals to Kemal and Greek King for Peace

Rome, Oct. 7.—Pope Pius, through Cardinal Gasparri, has telegraphed both Mustapha Kemal Pasha and King George of Greece, asking them to do everything possible to avoid the resumption of hostilities.

He has also asked the Near Eastern governments in which the Vatican has diplomatic representatives to use their influence to prevent war.

Greeks Cable Harding Asking Protection

Athens, Oct. 7 (By the Associated Press) The Thracian representatives in the Greek Chamber of Deputies have cabled President Harding and the American Congress asking them to use their good offices in an effort to secure effective guarantees for the protection of the Greek, Armenian and other Christian populations in Eastern Thrace in the event the Greeks evacuate the province.

Conference Again in Session at Mudania

Mudania, Oct. 7. (By the Associated Press).—The sessions of the conference here were resumed at 3 o'clock this morning.

Owing to the lateness of the arrival of the British instructions from home no formal session was held last evening, but the allied generals conferred late into the night.

Tino at Palermo With Jewels and Gold

Palermo, Oct. 7 (By the Associated Press).—Former King Constantine's baggage, which was unloaded from the steamer Partria today, included 228 trunks and other packages. A safe was among them and contained the former King and Queen's jewels and precious objects. There was also $5,000 in gold in the safe. This was paid to him before leaving Greece.

Love Letters to Ex-Wife, Court's Another

To Mrs. Grace Crocker of Cambridge, Edgar Hawes spoke burning words of love, and told her how she filled in his life an aching void—how she was the one woman in all the world who could understand him.

Then he returned to his home and wrote wistful love letters to Mrs. Helen Hawes, his divorced wife, telling her how she made of his life, by her absence, an aching void—how she was the one woman in all the world who could understand him.

The strange situation of a man making love to one woman and writing love letters to another, which ended by his jilting his sweetheart to remarry his wife, is unique because Hawes swears that he loves both, and neither of the women hold any malice toward each other.

COUNTS THE DAYS.

Here are some of the letters Hawes wrote to his ex-wife at the time he was making love to Mrs. Crocker, to whom he was engaged:

"August 11, 1922.

"Dearest Helen:

"I count the days till I can be with you and hold you in my arms. I love you and I know we will be happy again. It is too wonderful.

"Suppose Edna doesn't like me? The thought worries me continually. What have you told her about her father? She was such a little girl when I saw her last. I hope she still looks like you, with your dear eyes, and my chin.

"I have found a place, and it is needing you badly. There are so many things you can do better than most women. My sad little house needs your touch. And I need it so badly it hurts for me to think of it.

"Please believe in me, dear, and trust me. I have always loved you like I would love an angel. You are so good and unselfish. You never have been unkind to me for a moment. I think you would let me kill you if you thought I wanted to. You are too good to me, but I love you so much I will try again to be worthy of you.

"I think I have learned many things. I will try to understand now and appreciate you. G. is fixed, and there is nothing to worry about. Trust me.

"Good-bye, darling. I wish I could kiss your dear eyes tonight. I will soon. Your

"HUBBY."

"GORGET ABOUT G."

"Sept. 2, 1922.

"Well, dearie:

"I went to the shop this afternoon to get your letter. I was sure you would write, and was very glad everything is fine. Sweetheart, I have written you right along, and I mailed it to 94 Johns Street.

"Helen, I am so lonesome. You must tell me in the next letter when you are coming and I will have something to look forward to. I have not moved yet. Grace took her things all out and I will stay here until I move for good. I will have a place as soon as you get here.

"Won't you come this week? I must have you in my arms, and little Edna. I am so proud of her. I shall always be a man and I feel so good about what you told me. How could I deceive you? I can't. My heart is in the right place. With you.

"Mr. Sullivan and I had a talk today. He thinks we ought to have three rooms and not try to take roomers this Winter. I shall look for you this week.

"Did you tell Edna I gave her the blouse? If I could only see you both tonight, I should be the happiest man on earth.

"I watch the mail all the time for a letter from you. For God's sake forget about G. and get some new stuff in your dear little head and we will be happy this time. I love you more and more. Give me a kiss, dearie! Tell my little daughter she is coming down soon to her daddy.

"If you want anything let me know, and don't you work too hard. Forget about work. I am able to work and that is enough for this family.

"Goodbye, my little family. We will be together soon.

TORTURED BY GIRL HE JILTED

remarried. She found out two days ago, from a friend.

"I hadn't the heart to make her suffer," he said wretchedly, "and all the time I knew she would have to know sometime that I couldn't marry her as we were planning. I have lived in hell for three months, and now the two women I love are in hell because of me."

Hawes, who is a handsome, boyish man of thirty-six, frankly explains the two sorts of love he feels at the same time.

"Grace Crocker fascinates me as no woman ever has. During the two years I have known her, I have spent every minute when I was not working with her. It is almost like a disease. I am tortured at the thought of her speaking to another man.

PARTED 30 TIMES.

"I am afraid of the love I feel for this woman. I would follow her to the ends of the earth and go through hell itself just to be with her.

"Yet I know she is not the woman for me. She makes me so unhappy I could kill myself sometimes. She likes to make me jealous and she is so attractive that she always has plenty of opportunities to torment me with other men. During the two years of our intimacy, we have broken away from each other 30 times.

"We would determine to give each other up, and the minute we saw one another it would be the same thing all over again. We realize that we could never have made each other happy, but we could not let each other alone.

Mrs. Hawes strives to understand the dual love nature of her husband, and weeps piteously when he cannot see her.

WIFE FORGIVES HIM.

"Ed meant so well. He did not mean to hurt either of us. It was a situation no one could help. I shall make things as easy for him as I can; I will do whatever is best for his happiness. If he decides he will be happier with Grace, I shall take my little girl and go away some place, so he can have her," said the little woman bravely.

RAIN AND COLD WAVE DUE TONIGHT

New England is in for a "spell of weather." Fishermen, farmers, weather prophets and office boys for a week have been predicting rain—large quantities of rain—to break the twenty-day drought that has dried New England better than Izzy.

Forecaster Smith at the U. S. Weather Bureau in the Federal Building today placed his official stamp on the prediction. A heavy storm has been hovering over the Ohio Valley and moving slowly eastward for the last two days.

It is due to hit New England and the Eastern States tonight, with colder weather.

Fresh easterly winds will change to westerly and southwesterly, bringing the storm with them. It was extremely heavy in the Middle States, leaving a rainfall of 1.25 inches in Iowa, and more than an inch in other States.

Meanwhile the thermometer is steadily dropping. The coldest point in New England last night was at Greenville, Me., where the mercury registered 36. New Haven and Nantucket were the warmest with 58. Boston's highest was 55 at midnight, dropping to 52 at 7 a. m.

NOISE, THEN FOUR ARE ARRESTED

"Everything was perfectly proper. All four of us were sitting in one room waiting for the rain to cease. We had been to a dance and went to the Back Bay apartment of a friend on account of the rain. We planned to go home when it stopped."

This was the defence of two men and two young women who were arrested in a raid on Suite 3, No. 64 Astor street, early today. But Judge Hayden of Roxbury Court didn't believe their story and found them guilty.

The girls said they are Dorothy Reynolds, nineteen, of Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, and Margaret Frowley, twenty-three, of Roxbury. The men gave the names Edward Leary, twenty-three, of Garfield avenue, Revere, and Edward J. Sylvester, twenty-three.

According to the police their attention was attracted to the apartment by complaints from the tenants.

According to court officials the girl who gave the name "Frowley" is Miss Margaret T. Collins of Russell road, Somerville. They say she lives with her sister, Mrs. Crowley.

MORE U. S. TROOPS LEAVE GERMANY

Coblenz, Oct. 7.—Departure of casual detachment No. 43, comprising two officers and fifty men, who are to sail from Hamburg on the steamship Reliance about the middle of the present month, will leave the American forces in Germany at a strength of 113 officers and 1,096 men. Major-General Henry T. Allen, commanding the American Forces, also has charge of the American occupational troops, numbering 244 officers and 5,606 men.

ARREST BOSTON MAN ON BAD BILL CHARGE

Word that John Salvadore, twenty-seven years old, of No. 92 Burrell street, Roxbury, has been arrested by New Bedford police was received today when Boston police were asked to search the prisoner's room for counterfeiting devices. Salvadore, they claim, passed nine bogus $5 bills among his friends. Station 10 officers found nothing in the young man's room but a bottle opener. He left his lodgings two days ago.

Love Smashed

MRS. VERA M. V. JOHNSON

Suing for divorce, she says her husband (below) used her as a football six months after her marriage at sixteen.

Mrs. Vera M. V. Johnson, eighteen-year-old East Boston counter girl who applied for a divorce from Fred A. Johnson in the Superior Court, charging cruel and abusive treatment, claims that her husband used her for "a human football."

"He used to kick me all over the house," said Mrs. Johnson today.

Vera, of clear Norwegian stock, told of her short-lived marital happiness. "I was only sixteen years old when I married him. I met him at a whist party and he seemed so gallant and gentle that both my mother and I agreed that he would make a good husband. After the first six months my illusion of love was smashed literally and figuratively."

INDICT DOWNEY AND LANE IN BANK CASE

Paul Downey, bank clerk, and Humphrey Lane, gambler, were indicted for larceny of $125,000 from the Federal Trust Company by the Suffolk Grand Jury today.

Downey is the young clerk who claims that Lane and other gamblers took the money he stole from the bank by means of fake racing tips and cheating dice.

MEXICAN TROOPS ROUT REBEL FORCES

El Paso, Texas, Oct. 7.—Loyal Mexican troops led by General J. G. Escobar overtook a rebel column commanded by General Francisco Murguia in the mountains of Durango and routed the insurgents, killing Colonel Leopoldo Salinas and twenty-two other rebels and capturing General Alberto Salinas, Murguia's chief of staff, and Colonels Aivelardo Abrego and Ricardo Palacios, according to an official announcement in Juarez today. Remnants of Murguia's men fled into the hills, where they are being pursued.

BLUENOSE AND SMITH IN FAST RACE

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 7.—Margaret K. Smith, showing surprising speed in light airs, took a comfortable lead at the start today of the first elimination race to determine the Nova Scotian schooner that shall compete in the international fishermen's races at Gloucester, Mass., this Fall.

The Smith held the lead for the first two miles of the course, until Bluenose, international champion, which got away to a poor start, passed Canadia and Mahaska and stood on even terms with the Smith.

The Bluenose, the big craft that Captain Angus Walters drove to victory over the doughty Elsie, United States fisherman's cup defender last year, is twelve feet longer over all than the Mahaska, and both, according to their skippers, are bearcats in the wind.

The two other starters were the Margaret K. Smith, Captain Frank Wynacht and the Canadia, Captain Joseph Conrad. These two are not eligible for participation in the international race at Gloucester, the Smith being literally just off the ways and not a bona fide fisherman.

The Bluenose and Mahaska are both willing to meet the American Mayflower if satisfactory arrangements can be made. Telegrams from the Mayflower Associates at Boston were received by the skippers of the Canadian schooners. All four skippers stated they were willing to race the Mayflower for a purse of $5,000. R. W. Henry, chairman of the Canadian racing committee, said he did not care to comment on the matter.

Dunkirk, N. Y., Oct. 7.—Fire, sweeping unchecked through the business blocks at Main and East Third streets, gutted several buildings and did damage estimated at more than $100,000. A garage containing fourteen automobiles and one horse was destroyed with its contents. Guests at the St. Nicholas Hotel escaped in their night attire.

TWO-GUN PREACHER DEFIES DISTURBERS

McAlester, Okla., Oct. 7.—The Rev. W. E. Smith, itinerant evangelist, opened his services in Latimer County last night by placing a loaded gun beside the open Bible. After the convocation, a second gun was placed on the left.

The meeting was without other incident notwithstanding anonymous threats to the preacher that he would not be permitted to speak. He told his audience "a certain element" did not wish him to hold his meetings.

Shortly after services were under way, two automobiles loaded with men attired in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klan drrived.

RECKLESS AUTOIST CHASED TWO MILES

Following a chase of two miles in a commandeered automobile today Mounted Policeman Frank Sullivan arrested Clarence H. Pierce of No. 29 Dustin road, Brighton, at the junction of Commonwealth avenue and Harvard avenue, on a charge of drunkenness and operating while under the influence of liquor. According to Policeman Sullivan, Pierce drove in such a reckless manner as to force his (Sullivan's) horse on to the sidewalk at the corner of Boylston street and Massachusetts avenue.

Causes Arrest on Non-Support Charge After Disastrous Married Life

By HELEN LANE.

"He said he was a boxer before we were married, and after the marriage he thought he could use me for the punching bag."

Twenty-two-year-old Mrs. Catherine Quinlan of No. 15 Gilky court, Watertown, wept in despair as she told a Boston American reporter about the trouble which led her to have her husband, Francis Quinlan, summoned to court on charge of desertion and non-support.

"This trouble isn't one of too much mother-in-law. It's one of too little ambition on the part of the man. My husband thought my mother was Queen of America until three months ago, when she told him she was going back to Waltham for the Winter and was going to take the furniture, which is hers.

CARFARE "EXTRAVAGANT."

"He was frightened and made an awful fuss because he knew he couldn't support the baby without her. Before we were married he told me he got forty dollars a week. Divide that in half for his real salary.

"He called me extravagant," cried the pretty wife, "because I spent a dime for carfare instead of walking and bought ten cents' worth of candy.

"He told the judge, I had twelve hats and four pair of shoes. I have. Some of those hats, though, I had before I was married three years ago last August. One I made out of a dollar's worth of satline and ten cent's worth of flowers.

HAD LOTS OF HATS.

"The blue velvet which caused the neighbors to call me an extravagant hussy, I made out of two hats. The one I wore in court this morning, my mother bought.

"Robert White, my husband's lawyer, said: 'This young lady should be in Paris. She is a lady of leisure.' The only leisure I had were the steps between the dishpan and the stove."

Quinlan was ordered to pay $10 a week until the case is settled.

LIEUT. MOFFET TO BE FLYING INSTRUCTOR

Lieutenant Reuben Moffett, U. S. Army, has been designated as instructor in aviation in the National Guard. Lieut. Moffett has been assistant air service officer of New England. His duties will be with the 101st Squadron, which includes men who were conspicuous in war service. The squadron is regarded as an important part of the National Guard in this State.

SOUTHBRIDGE GIRLS ESCAPE BIG FIRE

Southbridge, Oct. 7.—Word from two local girls, nuns in the wilderness outside Haileybury, Ontario, where the forest fires are raging, told friends that they had escaped the fire, and gave a graphic description of the ravages of the great blaze. The two girls are Laurentia Boyer, known as Sister Alexis de Rome, and Emma Allard, known as Sister Ste. Celine.

The two nuns were teachers and fled the flames leading more than a score of children to safety. Arthur O. Boyer, No. 108 Hamilton street, received the wire from his sister, while Joseph A. Allard, father of the other girl, also received word.

CUNARD LINE MAY ABANDON BOSTON

The possibility of the Cunard Steamship Company, operating some of the largest passenger steamers entering the port of Boston, discontinuing their service here because of lack of cargoes was forecasted at the closing session of the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the question of freight differentials.

Further hearings on the differentials will be continued in Washington commencing November 13.

Boston is "off the map" as far as import and export traffic are concerned, according to Samuel G. Spear, treasurer of the Terminal Wharf and Warehouse Co. Mr. Spear said that the port is qualified to handle a large amount of business at a reasonable rate, but cannot do so because of the differentials.

The Cunard line operates ships to and from Boston solely because of the passenger traffic, according to Edward M. Hagarty, freight traffic agent of that line. He declared that many of his company's liners are obliged to leave Boston with a cargo of sand in place of merchandise, stowed as ballast because a regular cargo cannot be obtained.

LINERS LEAVE EMPTY.

Mr. Hagarty said that he went West last Spring, visiting Minneapolis, St. Louis, Detroit and Chicago, in an effort to get business for his line through the port of Boston, and found that shippers refused to deliver goods to this point because of the rail differentials. They turn all of their business to Baltimore and Philadelphia, he said, and no bulk freight comes to Boston from the Central Freight Association's territory.

Superintendent Herman A. Nordin the differentials abolished, he continued, although it feels bound to operate ships here whether it gets freight or not. Not long ago one of their steamers, he said, with a capacity for 10,000 tons of freight, sailed for Europe with only 467 tons, which was all that it could obtain.

Superintendent Herman A. Nordon of the Commonwealth Pier testified that this pier, which cost $4,500,000, is being used to only about thirty per cent. of its capacity. The differentials have practically destroyed the port of Boston, he added. Similar testimony was given by Captain A. H. Pillsbury of the Army Base Pier, who showed how the differentials had caused a decline of business at that pier.

SELDOM TOUCH HERE.

Captain Eugene E. O'Donnell, manager of the shipping properties of the C. H. Sprague & Son Co., which operates freight steamers from this country to Scandinavia, said that his vessels touch seldom at Boston because they cannot profitably bring cargoes here. Little freight is sent to Boston from inland points, he added, and Boston is usually passed up in favor of Baltimore, Philadelphia and Norfolk.

Henderson Inches, of the firm of John Richardson & Co., export shippers, said that regional of the differentials would cause his company to send its goods to Europe through Boston, whereas it now sends them through Philadelphia and Baltimore.

LAWRENCE AUTO SMASH KILLS 1, INJURES TWO

Lawrence, Oct. 7.—One man was killed, two men were seriously injured and several persons narrowly escaped today when two automobiles collided on the Lawrence-Lowell boulevard, near Merrimack Park.

Robert Busby, fifty years old, of Wamesit street, Lowell, received a fractured skull and multiple injuries and was dead when he arrived at the Lawrence General Hospital.

Herbert Carter, of Lawrence street, Lowell, and Frank Underwood of Bourne street, Lowell, are at the same hospital, where their condition is pronounced serious. Carter received a severe scalp wound, a fractured leg and multiple cuts and bruises. Underwood suffered injuries to the head, face and body.

Busby, Carter and Underwood were driving toward Lowell when they met a car coming toward Lawrence, just at a turn of the boulevard near Merrimack Park. As Underwood attempted to swing out for the other car his machine skidded and hit the oncoming machine. It bounced off the other car and crashed into a fence, smashing the car and burying the occupants beneath the wreckage.

In the other car were Mrs. Mary Barbault, Archie Barbeault and Henry St. Martin of Lowell. They all escaped injury.

Annoyed by Hubby

MRS. HERMAN PAZOLT.

Mrs. Pazolt of Boston and Wellesley, has filed a motion in the Suffolk Superior Court asking that her husband, who is a well-known Boston business man, be restrained from annoying her on street cars and in other public places. Mrs. Pazolt is also seeking custody of their two children, pending the outcome of the divorce proceedings.

U. S. PORTS FEAR LIQUOR BAN ON LINERS

Washington, Oct. 7.—A flood of international complications, the seriousness and extent of which officials did not care to speculate on today, is expected to follow the government's sweeping decision that no booze of any sort under any flag may come into the ports of these dry United States.

An immediate and world-wide howl of protest is anticipated by government officials from President Harding down to the customs agents and dry sleuths whose duty it will be to try to enforce the unprecedented order. Officials took the position today, however, that Congress framed the law so as to give the executive branch of the government no other alternative, and it is now up to Congress to change the law, if it wants it changed.

Orders were dispatched by the United States Shipping Board to cease immediately the sale of all liquor on all boats flying the American flag. As for the foreign ships, nothing will be done toward enforcing the order until the Treasury experts figure out a way to apply the "ships that touch liquor shall not touch our ports" decree.

A. D. Lasker, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, who has consistently fought for the right of American liners to dispense liquor, took a gloomy view of the situation. If the order is upheld by the United States Supreme Court, where it presently will be tested, Mr. Lasker has visions of the decline of the great American ports. He sees the great liners that now port in New York, Boston, Seattle and Portland going instead to Montreal, Halifax and Vancouver, with the consequent decline in business in American ports.

"The American merchant marine is immediately put at a great disadvantage," he observed. "Foreign ships will continue to sell liquor and will be preferred. If they can't touch American ports with it they will go elsewhere, or dodge the provisions by some means or another."

British and French liners that go into New York and Boston and Japanese liners that port in Portland, Seattle and San Francisco will, in theory, be business and their governments are prepared to back them to the limit—as already proven by the protests in the State Department.

KEEP CHILDREN FROM TUBERCULAR PARENTS

The removal of children from the homes of parents afflicted by tuberculosis, and the placing of them in "preventoriums" in an effort to check the spread of the white plague was advocated by Dr. Randall Clifford in an address at the Institute for Physicians conducted by the Boston Tuberculosis Society.

Dr. Randall Clifford.

Children of consumptive parents, explained the doctor, are exposed to infection. A "preventorium" he described as an institution where the children would be given plenty of rest, fresh air, and good food, which would halt encroachments of the disease.

STREET CAR KILLS EAST BOSTON CHILD

Robert Seeley, six, of No. 1 Lexington place, East Boston, was killed near his home when he ran in front of an electric car and was knocked under the wheels. The child had run from behind an outbound Lexington street car and the motorman of the inbound car could not stop it in time. Motorman John Collins of No. 91 White street, East Boston, and Conductor Frank Newton took the body in an automobile to the East Boston Relief Hospital.

LODGE, COX, FULLER, ON STUMPING TOUR

The opening guns in the Republican campaign will be fired at Holyoke next Tuesday night. Senator Lodge, Governor Cox and Lieutenant-Governor Fuller will invade western Massachusetts to sound the keynote of the national and State campaigns. The Senator will present the issues of the national campaign and will emphasize the humanitarian side of the tariff.

Governor Cox and Lieutenant-Governor Fuller will present the record of the State administration in the past two years, laying stress on the economies effected. Wednesday night they will speak at Stockbridge and a noon rally may be held at Great Barrington. Thursday they will speak at Pittsfield and on Friday at North Adams.

TWO CHILDREN DYING OF POISON

Two small children, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stafford of No. 1213 Massachusetts avenue, are at death's door in City Hospital, victims of a virulent poison, given them either by accident or design.

Their mother, only recently partly recovered from a long attack of influenza, is again a patient in the Psychopathic Hospital.

DISPAIR OF LIVES.

The two little girls, Louise, four years old, and Eleanor, five years old, have been unconscious for more than twenty-four hours, and doctors are almost despairing of saving their lives.

How the children obtained the poison is a mystery. They both have symptoms that indicate they have taken some medicinal pills which were prescribed for the use of their mother. These pills would have a beneficial effect on an adult, but would have serious effects when taken by a child of tender years.

It is thought that possibly Mrs. Stafford, her mind weakened by the ravages of her long illness, gave the children the pills in the hope that they would cure a cold, with which the youngsters were suffering.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

The medicine had benefitted her very greatly and she may have had the belief that it would do the same for the little ones.

It is considered possible that the children themselves may have obtained the pills from the medicine closet and taken them not knowing their effect.

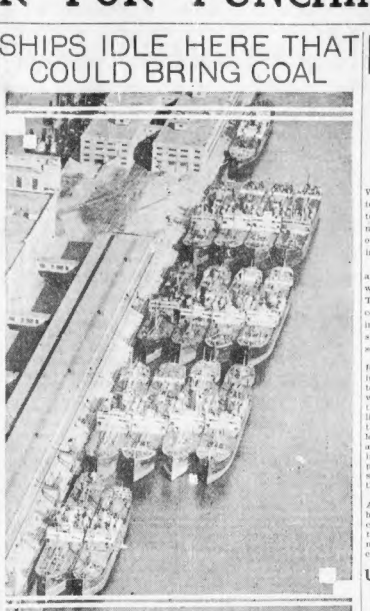
Mrs. Stafford was taken to the hospital after a long illness. A few days ago she expressed a desire to return to her home, and the hospital authorities considered her sufficiently recovered to comply with her desire.

$5 CITY JOBS ARE QUICKLY FILLED

Election Commissioner James F. Eagan announces that the much-talked-of vacancies in the Election Department for temporary registrars are filled.

Following announcement in the Boston American that Mayor Curley had sent an order to the City Council appropriating money to pay extra registrars $5 per night for three nights, the Election Commissioners' office in City Hall Annex has been deluged with applications. One hundred and four men have just qualified and the vacancies are all gone—and there aren't any more.

SHIPS IDLE HERE THAT COULD BRING COAL



FLEET AT SOUTH BOSTON ARMY BASE

These vessels, all in good condition, moored at the army base pier in South Boston, could be used to bring coal to Boston but for the official red tape that Washington winds about them.

VESSEL AFIRE; CREW GONE

Redance passed the schooner S. Pedro, nationality unknown, on fire 300 miles southeast of Cape Race and sighted fifteen empty dories.

No mention is made of the crew, but the finding of the empty dories leads to the belief that unless the men were picked up by a passing vessel there is little hope for their safety.

The message to the Marine and Fisheries from the Redance was as follows:

"Obstruction reported latitude 44.01 north, longitude 47.06, west, two masted schooner S. Pedro on fire. Sighted fifteen empty dories in vicinity."

This position is 600 miles east of Halifax.

In shipping records there is no ship named Redance, but it is believed it is the Reliance. The S. Pedro is not known here.

DEER HUNT THROUGH N. BEDFORD STREETS

New Bedford, Oct. 7.—A full-fledged deer hunt was staged through the principal streets, where ten deer broke from the enclosure at Buttonwood Park and for hours eluded the efforts of hundreds of men and boys to capture them. Up alleys, down main thoroughfares and through back yards went the deer with embryo "Injuns" and "pioneers" on the trail.

HUB BEGS FOR COLLIERS, AND SHIPS LIE IDLE

While Mayor Curley is beseeching Washington for colliers to bring coal to Boston, and while Washington tells him there is a lack of bottoms, more than a score of ships turned over by the Shipping Board, are lying idle at Boston docks.

At the Army Base in South Boston a whole fleet of idle ships is moored, with only a few men watching them. They are in good condition, and could easily be fitted for coal carrying. At other docks there are more ships basking in idleness, have been so basking for months.

City Purchasing Agent Frank A. Rock made a strong plea for colliers in Washington, emphasizing Boston's vital need of coal carriers. He was told, he announced today, that the Navy Department had no colliers to spare. Also he was informed that the Shipping Board could not loan any of its vessels to the city, as the board would then be placed in the position of competing with private coal dealers, which, said the shipping officials, is a violation of the law.

As a consequence, Purchasing Agent Rock believes Boston must hire barges for the transportation of coke and coal, unless the official red tape can be cut so that the bottoms moored about Boston's water front can be pressed into service.

UNIVERSITY LINES UP FOR H. G. WELLS

London, Oct. 7.—London University at a caucus last night adopted H. G. URGED TO PREACH FOR MOVIE CENSORSHIP

Ministers of Greater Boston are asked to preach for a state code of prohibition and regulation of moving pictures on Sunday, October 22nd by the Greater Boston Federation of Churches and religious organizations. Rev. Ernest G. Guthrie, president of this organization, has sent a letter broadcast to all Christian people to make house-to-house canvass of voters and urge every one to vote "Yes" on these measures.

IRVING T. BUSH,
President of Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, head of Bush Terminal Co., and Noted Writer on Economics.

I WISH I could show young men and women some easy road to success—but there is none. You may think you see someone travelling it, but if it is easy it is not permanent. It is only one of those rises which make the final fall all the harder. Success cannot be without character and character grows as your muscles grow thru exercise. We are too apt to-day to think this country has become great because God gave it natural resources and its people genius. It is great because our fathers worked and saved. It will remain great as we work and save. We have had men of genius, but genius uncultivated by work becomes a weed in the garden of civilization. If you have genius, cultivate it. If you are brilliant, you can go far. But genius or brilliancy will not win success without application—and that we can all give. Uphold your country and its honor by putting the best that is in you into whatever you are called to do and you will make a success of yourself and of your country. The way to get to the top is to begin by being the best man at the bottom. Success is not an accident, but comes to the man who does his work better than the other fellow.

DELUGE OF LETTERS UNITE IN OPPOSING MOVIE CENSOR

INDICATE DEFEAT AT POLLS

Referendum, to Be Voted on at Next Election, Stirs Public to Protest

We may have a Republican as Governor next year or we may have a Democrat. It may be a landslide one way or the other. But Massachusetts will not have a Moving Picture Censor. Not if the communications received by the Boston American from all corners of the State or interviews with prominent men and women and with working girls of Boston count for anything.

During the past twenty-four hours, there has been a veritable deluge of letters hurled at the Boston American against movie censorship. The censorship proposition, which will be voted on at the next election, on referendum, is going to prove one of the real issues of the day. That is sure.

CASH PRIZES OFFERED.

The Boston American offers cash prizes to those submitting the best letters on the subject of State censorship of the films. The prizes will be $250, $100 and $50 and, in addition, the sum of $2.6e will be paid for every letter printed.

So, readers of the American, get busy and send in your views. You certainly must have some ideas on censorship and we want to know them.

WHO WOULD CENSOR?

Editor Boston American:

Our educational system is now so cluttered with propaganda that it is extremely difficult to separate the wheat from the chaff. The proposal to place this greatest medium of education, the motion pictures, in the hands of a censor is merely an attempt to divert another and greater channel of information and education to suit the personal ends of a few.

The mind is more readily impressed and influenced through the eye—"seeing is believing." How easy then to influence the masses through the motion pictures, swaying public opinion to accomplish results desired by those in control of the censor or board of censors. Under our present system of corrupt politics it is a foregone conclusion that the censorship would be "controlled."

It would be a dire calamity if the people are so unwise as to give up their Constitutional rights to free speech and publicity and surrender this right to arbitrary legal power. I fail to see anything in favor of the State censorship law, as the laws which protect us from indecent publications and obscene pictures would certainly protect us from indecent or obscene motion pictures.

The Boston American is to be commended for its consistent and persistent fight against State censorship of motion pictures.

BEATRICE WADLEY.

Saugus.

STUPID AND PRUDISH.

Editor Boston American:

In the first place, the second place, and the last place, censorship of motion pictures is as senseless, as stupid and as prudish as putting pants and coats and Mother Hubbards on exquisite nude statues. Some minds are shocked by the naked truth, and too often hold positions of authority.

No one mind is brilliant or clever enough to detect the error or harm that may follow from seeing any kind of motion picture, and the salary of a censor, however generous, is not large enough to pay for the intellectual mind only fitted for a censor.

Censorship, presumably, is for the protection of our children's minds so that they shall not know too much. Bosh! Children are clever, and always have been, and know much more than we think they know.

Motion pictures have already educated them to the last degree; and like the gallery kids of old days they know what is good and do not like the bad. The horrible examples of minds contaminated by motion pictures are so few and far between as to be negligible. Fathers and mothers know their children are intelligent, and are sure their children cannot be harmed.

Censors have taken the tang out of many really good pictures and have too often spoiled the continuity of a splendid story.

Has my neighbor the right to call a policeman to restrain me from seeing any picture I want to see?

No! Then why do we give a censor that right, and pay our good money to have him do it?

GEORGE W. GAGE,

15 King Street, Swampscott, Mass.

ENOUGH JOY KILLERS.

Editor Boston American:

One of the greatest benefits derived from the numerous inventions of this progressive era is the education of our children by the moving pictures. Now that it has been developed to such an extent as to make it not only beneficial but absolutely necessary for the welfare of our present and future citizens, our lawmakers wish to pass laws to retard its progress.

On November 7, we are to vote on State censorship of the moving pictures. It is up to us to oppose a law which is detrimental to our own interests, as why should we create a body of joy-killers as we have enough at present and instead of censorship of the pictures we should do all we can to oppose the establishment of further bodies of such kind, which give a few men the right to inflict atrocities upon us, according to their idea of the way we should be educated. They will censor popular pictures and current events not to their liking.

I am a seaman and I am in the United States but a short time between trips. I get my news of recent happenings from the movies and I do not want to see my enjoyment jeopardized by these interferers.

WHO PAYS SALARIES?

Editor Boston American:

In the stalwart days of '76, the steadfast days of '61, we were quite capable of running our own affairs without the aid of a single censor.

Some will say "But we had no movies then to censor." True, very true, but we hall theatres and entertainments largely patronized at that. And never were the public morals corrupted in any way, shape or manner, taken as a whole.

"Of course," some will remark, "we had not advanced so far; we were not so bold. But now, with our present after-the-war conditions, which has left an aftermath of bobbed hair, ladies addicted to smoking, free mannered men and precocious, impudent youngsters, it is time to call a halt."

I want to say, dear panic-stricken censors, that we Americans are quite clever enough to run our own affairs. Nine-tenths of the American people are clean enough and big enough to pass up, so to speak, plays that are not wholesome.

We, the public, support the movies, not a handful of censors.

Speaking of laws, there should be a law against interference with a recreation and pastime that keeps men and women sane and children off the streets. We pay the salaries of the movie stars, so let us be their judge as to the fitness and lesson of the plays. We are quite as learned so to do and quite as anxious for our rights.

Our boast and brag has been that we are free people and millions have laid down their lives to prove it. Therefore let the law suppress crime and greed and anarchy, but let up, we beseech you, on the best American cure for all ills—the movies.

GRACE R. OLIN.

11 Elston street, Somerville.

PEOPLE CAN JUDGE.

Editor Boston American:

The attempt to foist movie censorship on the people of this Commonwealth is encountering the strong opposition which it so richly deserves and The American's action in starting a wave of public spirited reaction against the tide of bigotry is typical of the paper and as commendable as your fight for the Soldiers' Bonus.

I hold it the inherent right of the people themselves to judge what is fit and what is unfit for them to see, if they cannot distinguish between the good and the obscene in pictures, or deliberately patronize the latter in preference to the former, I do not consider that sufficient grounds for making their entertainment subject to the whim of men, who, if they were not narrow-minded, would be content to maintain their own positions in life and leave the professional crepe-hangers to theirs.

It should not be necessary to quote that immortal document to illustrate why such censorship would be un-American, inasmuch as it is so obviously opposed to the very fundamental principles of the constitutional government that its adverse effect on the privileges of the masses should be apparent to any but the biased.

At the bottom of all this reforming is the tendency to overlook the fact that religious ardor or purity of mind, which an individual fails to attain in his own church or synagogue, cannot be forced upon him by hypocrites who have seized upon reformation as a method of obtaining a livelihood and are no better, morally, than the average man in the street.

In God's name, then, fellow-Americans, let us dispute in twofisted fashion this constant encroachment upon our privileges; seek what spiritual salvation we may attain in our own respective houses of worship and force these bigots to seek some other source of income than that obtained in the curtailment of our liberties.

And as Bostonians, let us not forget The American, which enables us to express our righteous indignation.

Can Not Get Fair Board of Censors, Says O'Brien

"I am opposed to State censorship of motion pictures," said District-Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien. "Frankly, I have come to a change of mind. I favored some such control until this year, but now I feel that politics would play too large a part in determining what was proper and what was not proper to see. It would be impossible to get an unbiased board.

THOMAS C. O'BRIEN

"The only effective censorship is by the people themselves.

"So long as the pictures are clean and proper they will be well attended, and will provide refreshing entertainment and instruction. The public will not approve what is improper and they, therefore, will provide the most effective censorship."

"TRICKED" BY MATE ON JEWISH HOLIDAY

MORTGAGE FORECLOSED AS SHE OBSERVED YOM KIPPUR

Mrs. Dorothy Levenson of Malden, charges that her husband, Louis, took advantage of Yom Kippur, "a day on which Jews abstain from business of any sort," to foreclose a second mortgage on the house on Shawmut street, Chelsea, seen in the photo. The couple had been living apart.

Working Girls Strong in Opposition

There will be no censorship of moving pictures if the working girls of Boston have anything to say about it. This was made clear today to a Boston American reporter who visited one of the department stores of Boston and discussed the question.

Not one single girl, of the fifty who were questioned, favored censorship of the movies. And every one of them had a good argument against such an act.

FIRMLY OPPOSED.

Miss Anna Gibbons, No. 11 Jackson place, Jamaica Plain, is firmly against censorship of any kind, in the movies. She says:

Anna Gibbons.

"Why not put a press censor to work? Or why not have a censor in the front row at every theatre where vaudeville or musical comedies are running? Why not pass some laws forbidding people to speak to each other? Just about as sensible as trying to censor our moving pictures.

"It is a shame to think that one man can dictate to us what we will see in the theatres, on the screen. His personal views will determine our mind, for us, apparently. I certainly am against any censorship of the movies."

Wilhemina Jacome

"It seems almost like a stage joke to me. Imagine having one censor to see what pictures may corrupt us and cut them out. I have been going to the movies for a long time and I have yet to see a picture that was really bad.

"Certainly there are enough laws now to prevent any improper pictures from being shown. No theatre managers are going to risk their reputations by showing pictures that will offend their patrons."

Miss Marjorie Keown of No. 106 Oak Island street, Oak Island, said:

Marjorie Keown

"It almost makes one want to become a stump speaker when the question of film censorship is mentioned. In these days of progress, it is hard to understand why a small minority tries so hard to rule the rest of the people. I go to the movies often and I can't remember ever seeing a picture that was not proper. But, of course, if they have movie censorship, it will make a good position for someone and that is something.

Miss Mary Alfano of No. 352 Copeland street, Quincy, is an ardent movie fan and she is firmly against censorship.

Mary Alfano

"The movies of today are all that they should be," she said. "Many of them are taken from books that have been read by thousands of people, probably by those who are now trying to block the showing of interesting pictures. If this law is accepted, by the voters of the State, we are bound to miss seeing many good pictures because some small part of them do not meet with the approval of this censor. But I am going to tell my friends to vote against censorship."

WIFE AT PRAYER, HOUSE IS SOLD BY HUSBAND

A strange case, involving the Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur, and a suit of wife against husband came before the Suffolk County Superior Court, when Mrs. Dorothy Levenson charged that her husband, Louis, conspired to foreclose a mortgage on the holiday in order to deprive her of a $3,000 equity.

While Mrs. Levenson lives at No. 19 Alden street, Malden, the debatable house is on Shawmut street, Chelsea. In her suit the wife alleges that, although she and her husband are Jewish, he took advantage of Yom Kippur, "a day on which Jews abstain from business of any sort," to mail an auctioneer's flag on the property, and foreclosed a second mortgage on the real estate.

Mrs. Levenson stated that she and her husband are not living together, and she has now pending in the courts a suit for separate support.

WORCESTER IS INVADED BY KLUX KLAN

Worcester, Oct. 7.—"I would like to join the Knights of Columbus. I will give $1,000 to get a membership in that order, what do you think of that? But they won't take me in," declared F. E. Farnsworth of Boston, addressing a Ku Klux Klan meeting in Mechanics Hall here, attended by 1,200 men and women.

"Why such a howl should go up if a Protestant opens his yap to say anything about the Protestant faith?" said the speaker, the Rev. Dr. William J. Mahoney, of Atlanta, Imperial Kleagrd of the Ku Klux Klan, who was the principal speaker at the meeting. He said he was not speaking in Boston and gauged his remarks accordingly.

RAPS PRESS RIDICULE.

He took a fling at the Boston newspapers who had ridiculed his recent talks. He declared Congress will never pass a bill muzzling the organization that he represents, that he will defend it with his life. He also made a strong plea for Americanism.

He said the Roman Catholics are fighting the organization from the outside while the Jews are fighting it from the inside.

He admitted that the organization is not affiliated with Masonry, but declared that all but three of the imperial officers are Masons.

Admittance to the hall was by tickets, carefully and secretly distributed throughout Worcester, since the meeting in North Cambridge. Stairways leading to the hall were guarded by the Worcester police officers.

GARVEY TO RUN FOR HOUSE ON STICKERS

Richard J. Garvey, defeated at the primaries by Lewis R. Sullivan as Democratic candidate for the House from Ward 18, announced today he would run on stickers at the election "in the interest of fair play." Garvey laid his case before the Ballot Law Commission and that body ruled against him today. Had sufficient ballots been provided, he claimed, he would have defeated Sullivan by at least twenty-five votes.

GREEK PRINCESS IN TANGLE OVER ESTATE

Newport, R. I., Oct. 7.—Prince Christopher of Greece and Princess Anastasia, the former Mrs. Leeds, have sold to James B. Duke, the estate here known as "Rough Point." How the interests of William B. Leeds, Jr., were disposed of is not explained. Work of remodelling the house to suit the new owner was stopped on the report that a clear deed to the property was not forthcoming.

BOOZE ON WIRES COPS GRAB THE WIRE CUTTERS

Stanley Aniakewicz of Lynn is an inventor. But as in the case of Darius Green and a host of other ingenious inventors, at the psychological moment Stanley's invention went bloole. And as a result he appeared in Lynn District Court today.

Sergeant Eddie Egan of the Lynn liquor squad had long suspected that Stanley sold other things than cloaks and suits in his garment store at No. 13 River street. But he could never get the goods on him.

And here enters the big invention. Stanley's store is on the street floor. From it lead two wires to the basement. At the end of each wire was a jug. One contained kerosene, the other hooch. Beneath the two suspended jugs was a big rock.

John Law enters the store. Zip. Stanley cuts the wires. The two jugs crash on the rock, and the kerosene and hootch are hopelessly mingled. There is no evidence.

But today came the fall. Stanley was selling a blue suit to a gentleman down from the woods. So he went to a far corner of the store to turn on the blue light. And John Law entered while Stanley was twenty feet from the wire cutters. Another good invention was put on the kibosh, and Stanley went to the cooler. He lost the sale of the blue suit too.

JESSE LIVERMORE EXPLAINS HIS SYSTEM IN SPECULATION

SAYS HE IS NOT A GAMBLER

Tells Federal Grain Commission There's No Such Thing as Raids or Pools

New York, Oct. 7.—Jesse Livermore explained his system today.

Boston's famous "Boy plunger" of years gone by was a witness in the Federal Grain Commission's inquiry into grain speculation, in response to a Senate resolution.

Testifying concerning his career, he said he had been a speculator in all markets since boyhood and he had always bought and sold stocks and commodities on the basis of conclusions he had reached concerning the underlying conditions which might affect the market.

Jesse Livermore.

He said he was not a gambler, but described his operations as a "speculative investments." He defined a gambler as a man who sought to make a few hundred dollars and bought or sold a few shares of stock, not on a basis of conclusion, but on a purely guess basis.

In reference to his operations, he said they often amounted to seven or eight million bushels of wheat, but he denied that his deals ever affected the market for more than a few minutes, the time it took to complete the transaction.

He said he made his purchases or sales after he had discovered by test orders he was fundamentally right on the movements of the market, which are governed by fundamental conditions.

Livermore said:

"There's no such thing as a raid. What one man does is utterly lost in the shuffle, no matter what it is. And understand right now, there's no such a thing as pools. The papers write about 'bear raids' and the movements of the Waldorf pool or the Palm Beach crowd. Just talk. Speculators do not trust each other enough to work in groups.

"Nobody can smash a market by raiding it. On one occasion I swamped the market with 8,000,000 bushels of wheat after I noticed it was going down. Immediately after my sale the ticker showed a 10-cent jump and it kept going up. You see how foolish it is.

"I never buy in huge lots. I watch the market carefully for some time, then ease in and buy 500,000 bushels of wheat. If I see a response and the market seems strong, I go back for another half million bushels. I keep buying as long as it seems strong.

"If I am short on 5,000,000 bushels and the market slips, I cover. Last Spring I was buying wheat at $1.10 to cover my short sales at $1, but by buying steadily on the drops I finally came out of it all right."

The hearing is before Commissioners Victor Murdock, Vernon W. Van Fleet and Huston Thompson.

HUNTER WANTS TO "ROPE A DEER"

A means of circumventing the ban on hunting, laid down by Governor Baxter of Maine, has been discovered by Harry W. Gaston, present New Yorker and erstwhile Texan.

In a somewhat satirical telegram, a copy of which was sent to the Boston American, Gaston asked permission of Governor Baxter to rope or lasso a deer, provided he can run fast enough.

Gaston, who was halted at Newport, N. H., on his way to the Maine woods by the Governor's proclamation, earnestly assured the chief executive he did not believe a rope would set fire to the woods.

The telegram sent by Gaston, whose address is given as Broadway and Fifty-seventh street, New York, to Governor Baxter, follows, in part:

Mr. Governor: On this, the sixth day of October, I learn on my arrival at Newport, N. H., that you have issued a proclamation prohibiting the carrying of firearms into the timberland sections of your State until further notice.

Of course, as I understand it, I can build campfires in the woods, smoke to my heart's content, but I can't fire a gun nor even carry a gun into the woods. I have just learned from the Chief Executive of the State of Maine that it is possible to start a forest fire by firing a gun. I have never known of this being done, but presume that it may if one is particularly adept at such an art.

In closing, may I ask that you please advise me as a former Texan whether or not it would be permissible to lasso or rope a deer, provided I can run fast enough. I do not believe that a rope or lasso could possibly set fire to your woods.

Optician Advises All to Begin Reading Green

"SNOW will soon be here," says William J. Troy, prescription optician, No. 120 Tremont street, "with its accompanying dazzling glare. The Winter is generally a period of strain on the eyes. For that reason I would advise everyone to begin to cultivate a habit of reading the American's Green Editions, for that is one way to save your eyes.

WILLIAM J. TROY

"In the Spring and Summer even the city people get at least a small chance to look at green trees and grass, but for the next six months, or half a year, we will be deprived of even that relief. Even such a small thing as your choice of your newspaper, over which, after all, everyone spends quite a bit of time, may be made a help or a hindrance.

"The American might be considered the city's foremost paper on account of its up-to-the-minute news. Its color is another reason why it should be read by all."

By THE FLAPPER.
(Caryl Frink.)

The screen's best known Wizard crushed his old cigaret with his heel and lit a new one.

"Women," he said, in his deepest Shakespearian voice," are more faithful than men. That is to say, they have a greater sense of honor."

"And by that," he resumed, shifting to his other foot like an orator, "by that I mean that a man is less apt than a woman to have a true sense of gratitude."

MAKES HIS OWN.

"What I have told you," Mr. David Wark Griffith took up, "explains the scarcity of leading men. As soon as I train a young man to the business, he up and produces his own pictures and makes more money in a week than I make in a month. Contracts mean nothing. When an actor is through working for you it shows on the screen."

The Wizard paused to do a song and dance for the instruction of his musicians. He was rehearsing music for his newest picture, "One Exciting Night," at the Tremont Temple, where it is to be shown for the first time Monday.

"Now see if you can't put more thunder into the storm," the Wizard, sitting down in one of the seats so he could pretend he was the audience.

STORM SCENE.

The theatre was darkened. The storm scene flashed upon a little thumbnail screen used for rehearsal and the musicians rumbled their way through a Wagnerian storm passage.

When the storm had abated, and the fiddlers were tuning up for an emotional scene, the famous director got back on his favorite theme.

"Miss Gish has been faithful," he said. "She has worked hard and well. She is the greatest actress in the business. And she has never had the large salaries that some of the others have had.

"Now, I am glad to see her start out for herself. I am anxious to help her all I can. I want to see her reap the rewards she has long been earning.

"I can't pay big salaries because my purpose is to produce stories, rather than to present personalities. Even my pet boilers can't pay for my extravagant attempts at art. I am still paying notes on 'Intolerance.'

"And where is the young man who will sacrifice money for art? To tell you the truth I can hardly blame them. Richard Barthelmess did several pictures with me and then longed to try his wings. I helped him; picked his story. 'Tol'able David,' for him, and helped him out on the direction. I didn't mean for him to make as good a picture as it turned out to be,"—Griffith paused and smiled —"but I was glad to see him make good.

"Valentino, and the Talmadges —ah, but why start on that."

At this point the musicians started up on the love scene and the Wizard strolled over to give them a lift.

HELPED BARTHELMESS.

TO FORECAST RAIN WEEKS IN ADVANCE

Washington, Oct. 7.—In the not distant future it may be possible to get ready weeks in advance for drouths and wet spells. Science is working on plans for long-distance weather forecasting.

Dr. C. G. Abbott, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institute, has just returned from a visit to observatories on the Pacific Coast, where he measured the heat of the stars and of the sun.

The government is co-operating with the Argentine government in the study of the heat thrown off by the sun, which is found to vary at stated periods. Scientists in Argentina already get out temperature cards a week in advance and have found them approximately correct, Dr. Abbott said.

Tests are being made in Arizona and comparisons made with the observations in the South American country to ascertain any similarity.

"Whether variations of the sun may be useful in long-distance forecasting is something we want to determine," Dr. Abbott said.

RAID UNEARTHS HUGE CACHE OF STOLEN LIQUOR

New York, Oct. 7.—In the cellar of a factory near the East River as completely entombed by walls of brick and cement as the treasures of Ali Baba and the forty thieves, prohibition agents claim to have discovered one of the richest stores of contraband liquor yet seized—nearly $1,000,000 worth of champagne, whiskey and alcohol.

Much of the liquor, the agent say, was stolen from the Republic warehouse some time ago. In the gigantic cache, were ten barrels of champagne, 150 barrels and 2,000 cases of whiskey and about 500 five-gallon cans of alcohol.

Crowds gathered outside the factory, that of the Standard Carpet Company on 44th street, while the agents, led by Zone Chief Appleby and United States District Attorney Hayward, explored with flashlights the foundations of the building.

GUIDE KILLED IN FIGHT WITH TWO MEN

Haines Landing, Me., Oct. 7.—Following a terrific struggle wh two men who refused to tell the police their names, Otis Bean, thirt-seven, a guide employed at Pleasar Island sporting camps, was shot toleath.

The two strangers were apprehended by a posse. They madeio resistance. The police believe robery was the motive for the killing, a Bean's clothing indicated a terrifistruggle.

Deputy Sheriff Gouro removed the arrested men to Farmington pending a hearing. He ued without success to establish heir identity. They steadfastly efused to give their names.

Bean came to this pie to meet a train at Oquosoc. Sortly after his arrival he was seen skiing loudly with the two men ne a garage. Later two shots were ard and investigation revealed Bean's body on the ground.

East "Doesn't Give a Damn," Says Editor White

New York, Oct. 7.—New Yorkers who heard Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas and William Allen White, editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Review, praise each other publicly at the Lotos Club for the first time since their recent disagreement over the rail shopmen's strike, took stock today of a trenchant appraisal of New York by the editor.

"The trouble with this part of the country," said Mr. White, "is lethargy. You don't give a damn. You stand for fellows in politics here that we out in Kansas throw out by the scruff of the neck. If it's a strike, you let 'er strike.

"Out in Kansas we have 90 per cent. American stock, we're full of pep and vinegar and we do things."

FIRE KILLS 11 TAKING REFUGE IN CELLAR

Rosslip, Ont., Oct. 7.—One of the saddest features of the forest fire was the finding of the bodies of eleven victims of the cave-in of a storm cellar here—John Bond, his wife, eight children and a hired man.

Rescuers found the bodies of Bond and his wife with their arms entwined. They were suffocated. Two daughters, seventeen and eighteen, lay next, and in a corner three smaller children were clasped in each other's arms, while the remaining three were scattered about.

The only survivor of the family is a lad of nineteen years who was absent from home.

The property loss in the fire which swept so many towns in Northern Ontario will probably aggregate between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000. The loss of life will likely total more than fifty, while 250 farms were burned out.

GROOM-TO-BE, 68, DENIES APE GLAND REPORT

Thomas Gore, sixty-eight years old, a well-known Roxbury grocer, has filed marriage intentions to wed Mrs. Elizabeth Gallagher, fifty-seven years old, of No. 169 Roxbury street, Roxbury.

Mrs. Gallagher, who has been married twice before, met Gore when calling at his grocery store to make some purchases. An acquaintance was formed, and it eventually ripened into a love that will shortly culminate in a wedding.

Mr. Gore asked a reporter who called to see him to deny a report that he was to be operated on for the "monkey gland treatment" before the wedding. These reports, he said, have gained wide circulation among his friends, and are groundless.

Righteousness Plea Sent to Harding by Churches

"Righteousness and righteousness alone can bring permanent peace," is the message sent to President Harding by the Massachusetts Federation of Churches. "The attitude of the churches is completely misunderstood. We do not believe that force is the arbiter of history," they say.

LAWSON TAKES APARTMENT IN BACK BAY

Thomas W. Lawson, world-famous financier whose magnificent Summer estate, Dreamwold, in Scituate, is shortly to be sold to meet debts, has taken up his residence in an apartment, No. 90 Fenway.

The great financier plans to make his home there during the entire Winter, it has been learned. This is the same house formerly occupied by Governor Cox. It is believed that he will live there with his sister.

Mr. Lawson paid close to 200,000 a year to maintain Dreamwold while he was living there. He is paying $275 a month for the apartment on the Fenway.

Lemon Hair the Latest Rage of Parisiennes

Paris, Oct. 7.—Dainty Parisian maids displaying fluffy, tousled lemon tinted hair are all the rage in fashionable circles and in the Montmartre district.

The "lemon blondes" enhance their attractiveness by wearing scarlet and black gowns in contrast to the tint of their fluffy locks. Other tints, not heretofore used, have been introduced, but the lemon blonde is the most popular.

CURLEY STARTS FUND FOR BUST OF EDWARDS

Mayor Curley has given $10 as the first subscription to the purchase of the bust of General Clarence R. Edwards, executed by Sculptor C. S. Pinto, and offered for sale to the city, but which was rejected by the Art Commission.

The Mayor, in reply to a question concerning the action of the Art Commission, said: "Of course I do not pretend to be an art critic, but had I the authority, I should not hesitate to recommend the purchase of the bust, although Chairman Thomas Allen of the commission said that the sculptor should have a reputation before submitting such a work for purchase by the city.

Swallowed Needle Before Wedding; Found in Child

Stockton, Cal., Oct. 7.—Three years ago Mrs. Frank J. Schwing, then Miss Ethel Frisck, swallowed a needle two inches long. Two months later she was married. Charlotte, her twenty-two months' old baby began to cry yesterday and continued apparently without cause.

Mrs. Schwing investigated the child's repeated rubbing of a spot on her left shoulder, probed and found the needle, which she withdrew. Neither mother nor daughter had ever suffered pain from the needle until the girl felt it in her shoulder.

COLLEGE MEN FACE CONVICT SHIP TEST

The convict ship Success, now at anchor at Warren Bridge, which recently jumped into the limelight when Miss Sally Coulter of Emerson College created a sensation by remaining twenty-five hours in one of the dungeons, will now confine two men from Tech and Harvard.

Capt. D. H. Smith, commander of the famous British felon boat, has offered two prizes of $125 to any Harvard and Technology man who will undergo a week of solitary confinement in one of the ship's "black holes." If only one student endures the test he wins $250.

The hardships endured by the Emerson student who bravely withstood the ordeal for twenty-five hours will be repeated by the two college men for one whole week. They will be confined in one of the "black holes" of the ship, chained to a ring-bolt, and permitted one hour of daylight out of every twenty-four, dragging a heavy ball and chain on deck. They will subsist only on bread and water.

Captain Smith announces that applicants will be received on board the ship on Thursday, October 12, at 9 o'clock, and the test will start at 10 the following Monday and last until October 23. Applicants will be given a thorough physical examination.

Technology students are prepared to take up the offer and are determined to withstand the strange test. Many of them hold back as the test entails losing one whole week of work.

The WEEK'S BUSINESS in NEW ENGLAND

NEW ENGLAND CONTINUES TO BREAK BUILDING RECORDS

Although construction activities throughout the twenty-seven Northeastern States, as reported by the F. W. Dodge Company, show a seasonal decline of 16 per cent., as compared with August figures, and an increase of only 11 per cent. over the corresponding month in 1921, New England continues to break all previous records.

About three-quarters of the total construction in the country is included in the twenty-seven States covered in the report. The figures for the month total $271,493,000, and is the highest September total ever recorded. The total construction started during the first nine months, amounting to $2,634,365,500, is greater than the total for any year previous to 1922. On the nine months basis, this year is 51 per cent. ahead of last year.

HOME BUILDING INCREASED.

Residential building showed a slight increase in September, amounting to 37 per cent. of the month's total. Public works and utilities amounted to $50,379,000, or 19 per cent.; business buildings, $45,907,000, or 17 per cent. Both classes showed increases over August.

Industrial building amounted to $26,384,000, or 10 per cent. of the total, and educational buildings $21,213,000, or 8 per cent.

Contemplated new work reported during the month amounted to $350,801,000.

As compared with the corresponding nine-month period of 1921, New England shows the greatest gain of any of the districts reporting, an increase of 87 per cent. being reported. The New York and Northern New Jersey district is second with an increase of 56 per cent. The Northwest district shows the slightest increase, 4 per cent.

NEW ENGLAND FIGURES.

New England building contracts in September amounted to $30,368,000, an increase of 8 per cent. over August and of 89 per cent. over September, 1921.

Construction started during the first nine months of this year has amounted to $259,552,000, an increase of 87 per cent. over the corresponding period of last year. This nine months' total is 26 per cent. greater than for the entire year 1921.

The September figures include: $12,125,000, or 40 per cent. for residential buildings; $9,109,000, or 30 per cent., for business buildings, and $4,118,000, or 13 per cent., for industrial buildings, hospitals and institutions, and public works and utilities.

Contemplated new work reported during the month amounted to $53,169,000.

AWARDED CONTRACT FOR HOSPITAL

E. H. Porter Company of Boston and Peabody have been awarded the contract for constructing a hospital building at Melrose for the New England Sanitarium and Benevolent Association, according to Brown's Letters, Inc. Construction Reports. The building, which will be stucco, will have three stories and basement, 125x40 feet. The plumbing contract was awarded to Louis Browning of Boston and electrical work to James Wilkinson Company of Boston. The architect is Harland Perkins of Boston.

RAPID WORK ON BANK EXCAVATION

One of the most difficult jobs of foundation excavation ever undertaken in Boston is that for the new First National Bank building on Federal, Milk and Devonshire streets. Coleman Brothers, the contractors, are working at full speed, however, and expect to complete the job before cold weather sets in.

PROFIT-SHARING MAKES LOYAL EMPLOYES

The sudden return of prosperity and the consequent increased demand for labor of all kinds has again started the directing heads of many large corporations to a consideration of methods for improving their relationship with their employes.

During the war and immediately following a large amount of "welfare" work was indulged in by many concerns. That this work was not directed along the right lines is proved by the rapidity with which the elaborate establishments created for furthering it were abandoned at the first indications of the slump in business.

Profiting by this experience, many organizations now contemplate adapting to the needs of their businesses the admirable plan of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company which has been in effect, without change, for fifteen years.

MAKES EMPLOYES PARTNERS.

The plan of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company is based upon the idea of treating employes as copartners in the enterprise. A plan was evolved of dividing profits with the workers in such a way as to give to the most efficient employes an owner's interest in the business and thus furnish to each individual an incentive to promote the prosperity of the company.

Under this plan premiums are calculated on the annual salaries paid to those eligible at the same rate as the dividends on the stock of the company. Under the so-called "Sliding Scale Act" of 1906, by which the rate of dividends is increased 1 per cent. for every five cents reduction in the price of gas, the increase in the amount of premiums to be apportioned is dependent solely upon reduction in the price of gas. Because reductions in the price of gas must come as a result of increases in the business and improved economics in operation, there is a very direct relation between the collective efficiency of the employes and the percentage of the apportionment, which results in increased effort on the part of the employes to reduce the price of gas.

ONLY EFFICIENT WORKERS.

Only those employes who have been in the employ of the company for one year before the beginning of any fiscal year are eligible to take part in the apportionment, which is made at the end of the fiscal year. And only those employes who have shown the greatest regularity, intelligence and energy in the business of the company are included. This restriction is considered a very important part of the success of the plan, as it tends to make the list of profit sharers a roll of honor.

Premiums are applied toward the purchase of the preferred stock of the Massachusetts Gas Company, the holding company, at the then market price.

ON DIRECTORATE.

As a logical extension of the plan by which employes secure an ownership in the business, arrangements provide for employe representation on the Board of Directors. The director is selected directly by the profit-sharing employes and presents the viewpoint of the workers on all questions presented before the board.

The success of the plan is due to the fact that not only is the employe given an incentive to save, thus placing himself upon a sound financial basis, but is also encouraged to greater interest in the organization and its prosperity because of the opportunity afforded to acquire an actual part of the ownership.

Eight Millions for New Contracts in Past Week

October building in New England has started off at an unprecedented rate, according to the weekly report of building and engineering operations compiled by the F. W. Dodge Company. Contracts for the week ending October 2 totaled $8,210,500, which was $4,514,200 more than the corresponding period in 1921.

This is the best record ever made for building activity during any period in the past twenty-one years, exceeding that of the previous high mark, $6,909,000 in 1917.

ESSEX ST. PAVING NEARLY FINISHED

Work on the Harrison and Essex street pavement, being laid by the B. E. Grant Company, is rapidly nearing completion. The portion on Essex street up to Harrison avenue has already been finished and opened for traffic.

The actual time spent by the contractor on this job marks it as one of the most rapid construction jobs of its kind ever undertaken. Delays have been encountered, however, which have held up the contractor for a considerable period and prolonged the torn-up conditions for a longer period than it was thought would be necessary when the work was undertaken. This delay has been due to underground work and the necessity for removing the unused railroad tracks on the street.

Now that these obstacles have been overcome the B. E. Grant Company is bending every energy to complete the job as quickly as possible. A large force of men have been put to work.

HOT DAYS TEST ICE MEN'S SERVICE

Though the hot weather of the early part of the past week, both because of its unexpectedness and of its record-breaking intensity, put a tremendous strain upon the distributing facilities of the various Boston ice dealers, it is the proud boast of the responsible dealers belonging to the Greater Boston Ice Dealers' Association that not a single regular customer failed to receive ice as wanted. In addition to the regular customers, thousands of those, who during the Summer patronized the irresponsible ice "pedlars," were taken care of.

The local association is affiliated with the National Association of Ice Industries, which is a nation-wide organization of ice dealers pledged to the correction of abuses which have crept into the trade. Only those dealers who will subscribe to the pledge of the organization, to provide pure ice, careful weight and dependable service, can become affiliated with the association.

Just how important dependable service is to the health and comfort of the community can be imagined, if, instead of being ready to take care of a sudden "peak" load during the past week, the dealers had been unable to supply any other than those who regularly use ice the year around.

By making a determined effort to correct and to avoid the conditions which have made for misunderstanding between the various companies and their customers, the dealers expect to educate the public to an appreciation of the importance of dealing with the responsible dealers the year around.

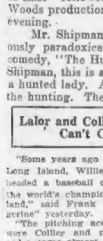
HARRY LAUDER HERE ONCE MORE

Sir Harry Lauder is back for a week at the Opera House. Few even of those who enjoy him, and enjoyment of Lauder is not confined to Scotch, realize how remarkable a genius they are watching.

Robert Burns, the poet of Scotland, did not write the music of his songs; he borrowed it from old folk melodies. Lauder composes his own irresistible melodies, and while his verses do not compare to those of Bobbie Burns, he can sing them like no Scotchman that ever lived.



Harry Lauder.

Until Lauder came the Scotch had only one good-bye song, "Auld Lang Syne." Now they have two, for "Wee Deough and Doris" is worthy to stand side by side with Burns' immortal lyric. And the rest of the world has blandly appropriated them both for its convivial occasions.

Lauder's jokes may leave all nationalities cold except the Scotch, and some of us who have Scottish blood may feel that he might pick better ones, but the composer of "I Love a Lassie," "Some One Waiting for Me," "Roaming in the Gloaming" and a score of equally delightful songs, deserves more honor than any general or politician who may come along.

The Paradoxical Mr. Shipman

Whether or not Samuel Shipman, the playwright, is himself a paradox, is a private and personal matter on which Mr. Shipman refuses to shed any light. But he certainly has made the paradox play. He is the originator and perpetuator of the paradox as a play title. He began it about three years ago with "Friendly Enemies." The same season saw the production of his play with the un-Kipling title of "East Is West." "First Is Last" followed. Then came "Lawful Larceny," the A. H. Woods production coming to the Plymouth Theatre on Monday evening.

Mr. Shipman maintains that other titles of his, not obviously paradoxical, are paradoxical in spirit. Take his new comedy, "The Hunted Lady," for instance. According to Mr. Shipman, this is a Shavian paradox. There is no such thing as a hunted lady. According to Shipman and Shaw, the ladies do the hunting. There are only hunted gents.

Lalor and Collier Can't Come Back

"Some years ago at St. James, Long Island, Willie Collier and I headed a baseball club which was the world's champions of Long Island," said Frank Lalor of "Tangerine" yesterday.

"The pitching aces of that club were Collier and myself, and we had a game almost every afternoon except matinee days. And if I do say it myself, that team played real baseball and Collier and I were good enough to at least make the Babe Ruths of the teams we played fan like air mightily. This team played together, with few changes, for almost three years.

"After the team had been disbanded for some seven years, Collier and I made a little bet, based on who could build the best team out of the youngsters in the town.

"We each set about organizing our teams from the fifteen and sixteen-year-old boys of the vicinity. To make sure we would win, both Collier and I decided to pitch for our respective teams. Every one of those kids turned out to be Babe Ruths as far as Bill and I were concerned, for home runs were the rule and the score ran so high that only the coming of darkness prevented the game from being a permanent affair."

Music Box Scenery Breaks All Records

"The Music Box" is the biggest theatrical scenically which ever took the road. It needs more baggage cars than "Ben Hur," "Sally" or any "Follies" which has yet left New York.

And the curious part of it is that the revue was originally intended to be small but beautiful, to fit the small and exquisite Little Music Box Theatre.

Behind the scenes at the Colonial the other day the callboy was bellowing "Second act, second act," and he was shouting as loud as he pain announcer in a Grand Central depot.

Willie Collier chuckled. "I told that guy to remember we were in a big theatre now, and he is scared to death everybody won't hear him. What he'll do is burst a blood vessel."

The huge Colonial stage was never so jammed full of scenery and props as it is for the "Music Box Revue." There are huge solid staircases down which scores of girls march in and maneuver and big machines to operate the mechanical lifts and other devices of which the production is so proud.

Miss Spencer Studying For Operetta Field

If destiny and desire are ever linked in human affairs, then it must have been written in the stars that Edith Spencer, who brings such vivacity, charm and vocal excellence to her part in "Shuffle Along," the all-colored musical success now at the Selwyn Theatre, was intended by fate for a stage career.

For as far back as she can remember, it was always the steadfast ambition of little Miss Spencer to shine behind the footlights.

"Indeed, on my first stage appearance at the age of eleven," she recently said, "I was so overwhelmed by the importance of the occasion (to me, at least) that I became sick and had to go to bed for several days afterward to recover from the high nervous tension. And that was just a church affair.

"It was while I was a school girl at the High School in Youngstown, Ohio, that I made my real amateur stage debut. I had appeared in concerts from the time I was seven years old. I am studying now for more ambitious work in the larger field of operetta."

Some Shows Fill the Galleries

One of the most disagreeable classes of persons in the world is the wiseacre. The theatrical know-it-alls are no exception. Recently there came from New York the pronouncement that gallery business was dead and that the balcony business was sick and undepend able. This was uttered with finality from which there appeared no dissension.

Elizabeth Hines

But like all these sagely conclusions, the real reason for the cause was neglected.

The folks who go to the balconies patronize that part of the house because they do not care to pay the price for floor seats. A few managers recognize this truth much to their profit. George Cohan has been one of these advocates of low balcony and gallery prices, and his show, "Little Nellie Kelly," is most emphatically proving the wisdom of this belief. They are the first seats to sell.

Nothing Outbats "The Bat" at Wilbur

When a new mystery play is presented the very first thing the producer claims is that it is better than "The Bat" or it outbats "The Bat." This all goes to confirm the opinion expressed by an important theatrical man the very first night "The Bat" opened a year ago when the famous mystery play started its memorable two year run at the Morosco Theatre New York.

Harrison Hunter

The theatrical man declared that Wagenhals and Kemper had at last given the American theatre something new in "The Bat." Something different and something that would endure for years to come.

How well he spoke is being demonstrated right now in Boston and throughout the world. That "The Bat" continues to be one of the leading dramatic attractions, despite the competition by those who frankly have set out to copy it, speaks well for the inherent dramatic strength of the original play.

NEW GRIFFITH FILM AT TEMPLE

"One Exciting Night" a Mystery Drama Full of Fun and Excitement

D. W. Griffith was the first to teach history on the screen. He gave the world the first great spectacular productions and wrote the first film epics. Now that history is being taught by many modern picture producers and great spectacular productions are becoming the rule, he has suddenly left his chosen field to others.

The author of "Birth of a Nation," the American "Civil War," "Intolerance," Babylonian times; "Hearts of the World," the great war just ended, and "Orphans of the Storm," the French Revolution, has invited Boston to witness "One Exciting Night," his latest picture, at Tremont Temple, Monday.

"One Exciting Night" is a mystery melodrama, dealing with fun and excitement all packed into a single evening. There is no great lesson, no moral, no mission. And yet the greatest genius of the screen has spent many months upon this comparatively simple theme. Griffith has made numerous program pictures, dealing with small subjects, but these were of conventional length, five or six reels. "One Exciting Night" is as lengthy a picture as "Orphans of the Storm," being eleven reels long. It was originally sixteen reels when shown in a Connecticut town recently. Then it was cut to thirteen reels, shown again, and now it is down to eleven. Griffith, himself, will be on hand to manage the first production, which will be given with all the care of any of his epics. Reports from Newport tell of audiences being tremendously delighted during the showings there last week. Boston is the first big city to see it.

LEW STONE SAYS 'BE POSITIVE'

"Be positive. You'll either be awfully wrong or awfully right; but at least be positive." That is the creed of Lewis Stone, playing a dual role in the Rex Ingram production for Metro of "The Prisoner of Zenda," which will be presented for the first time in this city at Loew's State Theatre the coming week. It is the creed of Rudolf Rassendyll, the heroic Englishman, who in the famous Anthony Hope story, adapted for the screen by Mary O'Hara, is for a time monarch of all Zenda. Again Ingram's astonishing knack for casting to type, or better, for casting to character, is in evidence. For the role of desperate adventurer he could use no other man than he whose actual attitude toward life was an aggressive one. In Lewis Stone he has found him. Lewis Stone is famous for his fighting roles of the Great Northwest. He forges his opinions, his decisions from the shoulder. It is the creed of the go-getter. "Be positive. Be all either be awfully right or awfully wrong, but at least be positive."

CRIMES HAVE THEIR INNING.

The old saying that "every dog has his day" has acquired a new meaning since the motion picture industry discovered the heart-interest possibility of canine actors and actresses. It has lately been proved that it is more profitable to be a dog than a human being. The dogs who have starred have, as a rule, a mood to, who act in tragedy, comedy and burlesque with "atmosphere" that would make the entertainers of dogs draw salaries that only plumbers and bank presidents can regard without envy. To be specific, "Queenie," the trained dog that plays so conspicuous a part in "Forget-Me-Not," which will have its initial presentation in Boston next week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre, drew a salary of $150 a week during his engagement. Other well-known dogs whose salaries run into three figures are Teddy, who is under a long-time contract at the Pennant studios, and Brownie, the Century Comedy star. The supercilious bulldog who eyes you haughtily from the window of the limousine or some rich debutante is a piker nowadays. He may have creditors, somewhere, but a fixed salary and a personal publicity man are glories to which he

SPICE OF 1922' AT OPERA HOUSE

"Spice of 1922," the big musical revue which scored a record-breaking summer success at the New York Winter Garden, will open at the Boston Opera House, Oct. 10, for a limited engagement of three weeks. This dazzling spectacle of mirth and melody is sponsored by Arman Kalis, and is in two acts and thirty-two scenes. "Spice" was written by Jack Holt, and staged by Allan K. Foster.

The most alluring feature of "Spice of 1922" is the famous Garden of Eden chorus of fifty beautiful girls, many of whom were recruited from the ranks of Greenwich Village artist models. Every type of beauty is represented, with the vogue running to bobbed-haired blondes and Titians. The girls present a startling novelty in the Japanese temple scene, clad in costumes of imported Oriental paint. In a blue and white Holland scene they offer a picturesque wooden shoe dance.

ST. JAMES THEATRE

"The Boss," Holbrook Blinn's tremendously successful drama of several years ago, is the play in which the Boston Stock Company will be presented this week at the St. James. The popularity of this Back Bay aggregation is increasing weekly, and there can be no doubt that Managing Director Giles is choosing a sensible, well-balanced program of plays. "The Boss" is a diverting sort of drama, and will afford Mr. Gilbert an entirely different role from any he has ever played in Boston, and quite a strenuous role for a stock leading man. The play combines politics, excitement, humor and a love story, which, after all, is as much as could be expected of any one play. It is worthy of mention that Director Pitt was with Mr. Blinn in the original production, and that he has, in his stage directing experience, produced "The Boss" no less than six times.

PRISONER OF ZENDA AT STATE

Motion picture fans who are looking for exceptional photoplays will have an opportunity next Monday to see a picture which is one of the outstanding productions of the year. This remarkable picture is the Metro production by Rex Ingram, "The Prisoner of Zenda", and will be shown at Loew's State Theatre. It is a story teeming with dramatic action, full of intrigue, romance and excitement. It concerns the adventures of an English gentleman, Rudolf Rassendyll, who, because, of a remarkable likeness to the ruler of the mythical kingdom of Ruritania, becomes for a time its actual ruler and wins the love of the Princess Flavia. "The Prisoner of Zenda" has stepped out of the pages of the book and comes very much to life on the screen. Produced and directed by the makers of "The Four Horsemen," it has been done upon the same great scale with the same faithfulness to the spirit of the written page. Lewis Stone as the Englishman, who by the vagaries of fate was called upon for a time to impersonate the king, gives a flawless performance in the dual role. Alice Terry, beautiful as a lily, moves charmingly through the love interest of the picture to the ultimate renouncement of her heart's desire. Robert Edeson as the faithful Colonel Sapt gives a splendid interpretation of a character which has infinite appeal. The supporting cast is of unusual excellence. A comedy and a news weekly will also be shown.

S. B. Y. C. AT KEITH'S

The South Boston Yacht Club has ordered one hundred tickets to Keith's Theatre for Monday night, October 9. The occasion is in honor of Al and Fanny Stedman, two of its members who are one of the headline acts on the bill.

NEW WOODS PLAY AT PLYMOUTH

On Monday night the Plymouth will house the first attraction that A. H. Woods has sent to Boston this season. The offering will be "Lawful Larceny," a play by Samuel Shipman, known to fame as co-author of "East is West" and "Friendly Enemies," which found an admiring public for seven months of the past season at the Republic Theatre, New York.

The story is an absorbing one, dealing with a wife who plans and executes a neat revenge upon a rival who has stolen her husband away. The wife returns from a visit to California and receives from her husband a confession to the effect that he has been playing around with an adventuress who has worked quickly and reduced him to bankruptcy. The wife, instead of fleeing to the divorce court, plans a smart revenge upon her rival, to whom she the wife is unknown. Taking the law into her own sweet hands what she doesn't do to the vampire isn't worth mentioning.

With the cast announced by Mr. Woods, "Lawful Larceny" should be excellently played. There is Lowell Sherman in his original role of a likable villain. Also Edna Goodrich and Belle Bennett in the two leading feminine parts. Others of the company include: Byron Beasley, Fleming Wards, Ida Darling, Margaret Bird and David Landau.

WILD IRISH ROSE AT PARK

A picturing of an Irish drama dear to the hearts of all that beat to the undeniable charms of the Emerald of an older day when song and fun and love were the recognized characteristics of the race will be presented at the Park Theatre beginning Monday, entitled, "My Wild Irish Rose." It is the screen version of Houdecault's ever green and popular drama, "The Shaughraun."

In the days of our fathers this drama found unmeasured popularity with all classes of theatre-goers of all sizes, for there was embraced in it the elements that provide delectable entertainment. It had the romance dear to every human heart, the happy spirit and untethered wit that rollicked and transported everysoul to dancing delights, and there were the honest sentiments that march in unering step with honored human traditions.

Never a more delectable character than Conn, the impish rover-do well, has appeared in drama. He is a model of irresponsibility, yet in this trait through his sterling loyalty tried by desperate circumstances he captures all hearts. He is, of course, the leading figure of the photoplay but he is in good company.

GLOBE THEATRE

Houdini in "The Man From Beyond" will begin the second week of his limited engagement at the Globe Theatre tomorrow, Monday evening. This wonderful picture, which proved a tremendous magnet in drawing crowded houses at every performance last week, is an impressive spectacle full of realistic fury so intense that one's breath bids fair to come short and quick. The picture begins with a mystery and ends with the greatest thrill the screen has ever offered, the spectacle of Houdini swimming and being whirled through the Niagara Rapids to the verge of the falls in his successful rescue of a girl in a canoe. Another big feature is Mystic Clayton, the world's greatest exponent of mysticism.

FORGET-ME-NOT AT LOEW'S

An exceptionally human interest story deeply tinged with pathos which takes rank as one of the foremost picture productions of its kind is to be seen at Loew's Orpheum Theatre the coming week. This remarkable photoplay is Metro's drama of heart hunger, "Forget-me Not," and depicts with great fidelity the life story of two foundlings. It is a story of faith and love and a yearning for happiness that is thoroughly human from beginning to end. The orphans are played by Bessie Love and Gareth Hughes, and their characterizations stamp them as finished artists. A remarkable and noteworthy feature in connection with the showing of "Forget-Me-Not" will be the attendance daily of approximately 250 orphans from the asylums of Boston, to witness the regular performances in the theatre, including the vaudeville, which is of a particularly high grade. These unfortunates beings will for the time be made happy through the generosity of the Boston Lodge of Elks, who will serve them a luncheon at the Elks' Home on Somerset street, and by the Moxie Company and Gilchrist Company, who will distribute candy, toys and other novelties. The vaudeville is headed by the season's most notable presentation, "You'd Be Surprised," presented by Lew Canter.

NEW THEATRE IN SOMERVILLE

Somerville is to have another new playhouse. Ground has already been broken on Ball Square, midway between Winter Hill and Teele Square. The theatre is being built by John E. Locatelli, formerly a member of the Somerville Board of Aldermen, whose son, Albert Locatelli, is the head of the Central Amusement Company now operating the Central Theatre in that city.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

The unhappy union of a pretty young wife to a harsh old farmer brings about the big denouement in the plot of Richard Barthelmess' latest dramatic starring vehicle, "The Bond Boy," which is the popular First National attraction at Gordon's Olympia Theatre beginning Monday.

McISAAC says that:

"LITTLE NELLIE KELLY" at the Tremont continues to sell out at all performances. More popular than the "O'Brien Girl."

"MUSIC BOX REVUE," with Willie Collier, Florence Moore, Santley, Sawyer and a huge company, is packing the Colonial all the time.

"SHUFFLE ALONG," the colored musical comedy at the Selwyn, reports the "standing room only" sign out all the time.

"THE BAT" at the Wilbur, most thrilling and mysterious of dramas, is well worth a visit. Enormous business.

FOOD FAIR TO OPEN MONDAY

Exposition to be Held in Horticultural Hall During This Month

The Boston Food Fair will open in Horticultural Hall building, Monday morning, Oct. 9, at 10 o'clock a. m., with everything in readiness.

During the last few days the erection of the booths has gone forward rapidly with a large corps of men working at top speed, putting into position the various units already manufactured by accurate plans, so that everything will move along like clock-work.

Thus it is, that when the doors open Monday morning, everything will be ready, the booths and exhibits in their various places, and even the earliest visitors will find nothing uncouth to mar the beauty, the symmetry, the artistic effect within the great halls.

The Food Fair management occupied offices at Horticultural Hall since Thursday of the week just ended, where general manager Sherman and chief executive officer, secretary and treasurer, J. H. Brown, have been constantly supervising the concluding arrangements, and meeting and consulting with exhibitors and others, and completing, in fact, all those details which are necessary for the easy management when the public will be allowed admission. The management will be at the building day and evening until the closing hour of the closing day, which is 10 o'clock, Saturday, Oct. 21.

LAUDER IN SOCIETY

Several interesting events have been arranged for Sir Harry Lauder during his stay in Boston next week. On Tuesday, at noon, he will be the guest of President Cousens and Dean McCollister of Tufts College, when he will address 1,200 students in Goddard Chapel. Wednesday noon he will be the guest of the Boston Rotary Club in the Hotel Club. Thursday morning he will attend the games of the Scottish Athletics at Caledonian Field, and the social events and a visit to Mayor Curley at City Hall are also scheduled for the week.

"OH, JOY" STAYS LONGER

A new addition to the already large cast of principles with the Afro American Follies "Oh Joy" and one that will be of interest to the theatregoers of Boston is Pat O'Malley, a Boston boy, one of the few colored singers that has entertained at Revere Beach, Nantasket Beach and other resorts in and around Boston. Bobby fits in nicely with the other clever members of the show, which include Salem Tutt Whitney, J. Homer Tutt, Ethel Waters, Andrew Tribble, Anson Davis, Julian Costello, Ethel Williams and a cream-colored chorus of twenty, every one a singer and dancer. The "Oh Joy" engagement has been extended another week at the Arlington Theatre.

SHUBERT VAUDEVILLE

Commencing with next Monday matinee, October 9, the Majestic will present elaborate Shubert musical comedy revue, "Step This Around," which Messrs. Weber and Friedlander will present here with a big cast of principals. The featured comedian is James C. Morton, and in the supporting cast will be Dan Healy, George Tapps, Harry Hoosa, Edna, Mamie and Alfred Morton, Margo Raffaro, an exceptionally clever dancer, and a dainty beauty chorus.

The book is by Harlan Thompson, and the lyrics and music by Mr. Friedlander, who has staged the production in lavish style, twelve scenes being required. The costumes are said to be particularly pleasing to the eye.

James Morton, who carries the burden of the many big comedy scenes comes here direct from the New York Winter Garden, where he has been playing all Summer in "The Spice of 1922," and many of the Winter Garden girls are in the chorus. Mr. Morton will have the assistance of his entire family, Mamie, Edna and Alfred Morton, and will also head the Shubert vaudeville program.

ARSENIAN AT STATE BALLROOM

Baron Arsenian, internationally famed king of ballroom dancing, and former instructor of the film star, Rodolph Valentino, with Miss Frances Aldrich, Boston's own queen of dancers, will appear at the State Ballroom next Monday, tomorrow evening, as an added attraction. These two renowned performers have been especially engaged by the management of this spacious and beautiful ballroom to give a series of exhibition dances similar to those which he once presented during their vaudeville appearance earlier in the season.

GORDON'S SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA

There were no photographers to record the dress and customs of today when the barbarians overthrew ancient Rome. Nevertheless, Cecil B. DeMille has produced a wholly realistic reproduction of this for his latest Paramount picture, "Manslaughter," coming to Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia Monday.

MATHERINE BACON

Matherine Bacon, the young English pianist now touring this country, announces a recital in Jordan Hall on Monday afternoon, October 16. Last season marked the first year of this artist's activities in this country and she performed with signal success in New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Washington etc.

Here Next Week

Mystic Clayton

FRITZI SCHEFF

GLOBE THEATRE

There is no other psychic performer or mind reader who has attained the popularity of Mystic Clayton, Boston's famous mentalist, now appearing at the Globe Theatre in conjunction with Houdini's newest and thrilling photoplay, "The Man From Beyond." Clayton has a host of admirers among the multitudinous playgoers of this city, having won their confidence in the past four years, during which time he appeared in person for a total of nineteen weeks.

SHAUGHRAUN 'ON SCREEN

Pauline Starke was selected for the heroine of "My Wild Irish Rose," which comes to the Park Theatre next week, because she is the perfect type for the Irish beauty. Her broad white forehead and swift figure blends the charm which have made the Irish women famous for their captivating physical attractions. She has the role of Moya, who is in love with Conn, the shaughraun, a role played by Pat O'Malley. The shaughraun possesses a natural brogue that nothing short of a cheese knife would cut. The star and the Celtic features of Pat O'Malley makes him exceptionally well fitted for the role.

"My Wild Irish Rose" is based upon "The Shaughraun," a famous stage success by Dion Boucicault, which made a hit in Drury Lane Theatre in 1875, and at Wallack's Theatre the same year.

ALBEE'S BIRTHDAY

Sunday, October 8, marks the sixty fifth birthday anniversary of Mr. E. F. Albee, president and head of the vast B. F. Keith vaudeville organization. Friends and associates planned an elaborate birthday dinner in his honor, but he found it out and absolutely sat down on it. It is something Mr. Albee is always opposed to, although he is always glad to honor others. Mr. Albee seems to have his own way of "celebrating" the successive years of his unswerving devotion to the theatre and its public. Thus 1922 was made to celebrate on two continents by the donation of a noble portrait of Edwin Booth through the International Restarians to the Shakespeare Memorial Gallery at Stratford-on-Avon.

JOHN McCORMACK COMING

John McCormack, the Irish singer, is now on the high seas on the steamship Olympic, which is expected to arrive in New York harbor Wednesday, October 11.

Arrangements have been made whereby the great tenor is to give thirty concerts in America, one in New York, one in Philadelphia, and one in Boston, the latter to take place in Symphony Hall on Wednesday evening, October 25. Shortly after this concert he is to bid farewell for the time being and return to Europe.

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQ. AND GORDON'S STRAND

Superb in strength of story and cast, "Human Hearts," the Universal Jewel, which comes to Gordon's Central Square, Cambridge, and Gordon's Strand, Dorchester, for an engagement of three days, stands forth prominently among the offerings of recent months as a drama teeming with incidents and action of a compelling variety. This picture starts its run Monday. House Peters, popular veteran of stage and screen, heads the notable cast.

"THE ROSE OF STAMBOUL"

Following the ensuing last two weeks of Julia Sanderson in "Tangerine" at the Shubert Theatre there will be seen at this house "The Rose of Stamboul," the resplendent musical comedy success from the palatial Century Theatre in New York.

GALLI-CURCI AT OPERA SUNDAY

Favorite Prima Donna to Give First Concert Here This Season

Few singers in the world's history have drawn such audiences as Galli-Curci, and seldom has it been their experience to do in one day what the' favorite prima donna will accomplish on her visit to Boston tomorrow afternoon, at the Boston Opera House, where she gives her first Boston concert of the season.

MARGARET WALCH RECITAL

Margaret Walch, the young Boston pianist who makes her professional debut in Jordan Hall on Saturday afternoon, October 21, has met with considerable success as a concert field up to the present time and has proven that she is the possessor of a most pleasing technique and many exceptional musical attributes. She is a young woman who has worked diligently, intelligently and carefully and she shows in her results all of these characteristics.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

That the regular music season is well on its way is attested by the announcement from the subscription departments from those organizations whose magnitude requires a large list of season ticket-holders to make their engagements possible.

From New York, where the San Carlo Opera Co. are now giving a five weeks' season at the Century Theatre, we learn that large audiences are each night welcoming the Mr. Gallo's performances. Boston has not yet seen Anna Fitziu in the role of "Tosca," which she will include in her offerings here next month; reports from New York agree that she sings the "Vissi d'Arte" with rare significance; her Elsa in "Lohengrin" is already known here, and her Leonora in "Trovatore" and Violetta in "La Traviata" will be equally well received here.

THE UKRAINIAN CHORUS

Max Rabinoff, true to his traditions of presenting gala "performances" at the former Metropolitan and Boston Grand Opera Company, who introduced Pavlowa and her Ballet Russe to America, will this season present the Ukrainian National Chorus in a series of concerts in this country and the tremendous tour of thruimph throughout Europe. These concerts will be divided into two parts—with the unique art and new music of the Ukrainian National Chorus in its music of the Ukraine, formerly little Russia, and a separate program of Russian opera arias and songs of great Russia, given by two alternating artists of the opera in Russia, Mlle. Oda Slobodskaya and Mme. Nina Koshetz.

Nina Koshetz.

The combination will be most unusual, a far richer ensemble and a more distinctive one, with the chorus in native dress, than the average concert presents. A new folk music by a "symphony" of human voices such as America has never heard, a feast of the great Russians by a great interpretative artist—the concert will be a "composite of Russian vocal art."

GAYETY THEATRE

"Talk of the Town," which comes to the Gayety Theatre this week will be just what its name means. If reports from around the burlesque circuit are good indications. This musical revue is known as a good chorus girls, sparkling comedians and new and novel vaudeville specialties as its high lights.

Frank R. Murphy, tramp comedian; Charles Fagan, eccentric character, and Frank Morris Texas, soprano prima donna, beautiful in both voice and appearance, are the featured members of the company of fifty.

The action of the revue calls for a dozen changes of full stage scenes for rich variety of costumes for the ensemble and elaborate gowns for the leading feminine members of the cast. The scenes will include China-town, "In Hawaii," "Swimming," "On the Board Walk," "The Shop Window" and other locations designed to display the talents and charms of the entertainers to fullest advantage.

ISADORA DUNCAN

Passports could not be obtained for the troupe of Isadora and Elizabeth which Isadora Duncan has trained during her sojourn in Europe and planning to bring to this country to tour with her. Therefore she will dance the entire programs of her coming three appearances in Symphony Hall, Boston, on the evenings of October 19 and 20 and the afternoon of October 21.

These programs will be symphonic in character and a full symphony orchestra under Nahan Franko will provide the music.

BIG MUSICAL COMEDY AT SOMERVILLE

"Fascinating Widow" to be Presenteed by the Players Next Week.

An attraction of extraordinary merit and one which requires considerable courage to attempt, is "Fascinating Widow," the famous musical comedy in which Julian Eltinge scored his great success as a female impersonator, will be given by the Somerville Players at their popular Arlington Theatre next week. The production of "The Fascinating Widow" will have two features of unusual interest to Somerville theatregoers. It will serve to introduce Harry Bond, an eminent actor, who has been engaged for the remainder of the season as leading man of this organization; and it will also serve to introduce Tommie Martelle, another Julian Eltinge's rival, who has been engaged especially for this production and who has appeared as "The Fascinating Widow" more than a thousand times.

Tommie Martelle

STEINERT HALL

The Steinert concerts are to be given again during this coming season, and in Symphony Hall, the same as last year with the change only to Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Steinert presents several of the best known artists available for the concert stage. Titta Ruffo, the leading Italian baritone, will open the Steinert season on October 22; when he will have the assistance of Mme. Yvette L'Arle, soprano at the Metropolitan Opera, and of Alberto Sciarretti, a pianist of note from Italy.

Sophie Braslau, contralto and Emilio Gogorza, baritone, are to take the place on November 5 of Mary Garden, who has recruited from coming to America until later in the season.

Mme. Frances Alda, soprano, and Alexander Siloti, Russian pianist, are to give a joint program on January 28; two celebrated French artists, Alfred Cortot, pianist, and Jacques Thibaud, violinist, will co-labor on February 11, and a date yet to be decided upon, Mr. John McCormack, tenor, will close this series of concerts which bids fair to become an established Boston institution.

WANTS FREE GOLF

Dame Boston's ears must burn. Somebody is talking pretty hard about her, somebody who admires Boston, too. Boston, however, is very behind hand in its municipal golf courses, however, in the opinion of this same critic.

"I am amazed that Boston has only one municipal golf course," says Franz Marie Texas, the handsome young Texan, whose classical songs are one of the most artistic features of "Talk of the Town," the burlesque revue at the Gayety Theatre next week.

"Nearly every city in which I appear," continued Miss Texas, "has more than one public golf course. Why Chicago has a dozen and is building more. And land for golf links cannot be any more expensive in Boston than in Chicago. You have a splendid private golf courses, I know. I have had the pleasure of being guest at some of them. But there are hundreds, even thousands of persons, who have not the opportunity of joining private golf clubs, who would like to play. And as a public golf course for a city the size of Boston is simply laughable. It cannot be. What is Boston coming to? Maybe the dear old lady doesn't know about golf as a growing institution."

NEW OFFICE SUPPLY COMPANY FORMED

A new organization, known as the Morse Office Equipment Company, has been incorporated with $50,000 capital for the sale of office equipment and appliances. The incorporators are A. Morse, formerly president of the Morse Typewriter Company of New York, J. S. Morse, who for ten years conducted the National Typewriter Exchange at 110 Broad street, Boston, and Burnett Carp, part owner of Carp Manufacturing and Provision Company, of Boston.

The firm has moved from its temporary quarters at 110 Broad street to a permanent location at 94 Washington street, at Adams square. The stock includes a large variety of desks, chairs, filing cabinets, safes, adding machines, typewriters, check protectors, and other office appliances. The experience and favorable business reputation of the incorporators is ample assurance of the success of the new organization.

COMEY ENGAGED AS ZONING DIRECTOR

The City Planning board announces that it has retained the services as zoning director of Arthur C. Comey. Mr. Comey was a member of the Homestead Commission and has been identified with zoning work in Detroit, Milwaukee, Brookline, Cambridge and Brockton.

Mr. Comey is at present acting in an advisory capacity in connection with Cambridge and Baltimore plans.

Reception to Lodge

Greenfield, Oct. 7.—Senator Lodge, Governor Cox and Lieutenant Governor Fuller will be tendered a reception at the Mansion House here on next Thursday.

MOTOR NEWS and NOTES

C. F. DONNOCKER, Automobile Editor

LATEST DODGE SEDAN TO BE POPULAR

Because it possesses qualities of comfort that the open car does not have it was inevitable that the enclosed car should gain in popularity. Manufacturers have long known that there was a tremendous latent demand for the enclosed car, but its popularity has been retarded by the difference between the price of the open and the enclosed models.

PROBLEM SOLVED.

There were two ways to remedy this. One was to construct an enclosed body in the same manner as in the past, but using cheaper materials and workmanship; the other to build a body on new principles that would be as good, if not better, than the old type and yet in the construction of which much of the expense would be eliminated.

Always in the forefront of motor car progress the engineering organization of Dodge Brothers in Detroit has been studying the problems of providing a low-priced, high quality, enclosed car, and it offered the suggestion after the close of closed body construction the successful principles of open car metal body building. The result is the steel body business sedan and coupe, a new type of car that in many sweeping advances offers a practical thing of an acknowledged luxury. The all steel body is riveted and bolted together so that it cannot squeak or rattle and the finish baked on enamel that is not subject to the deterioration of paint and varnish.

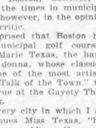
SPACE FOR LUGGAGE.

Another, and a very important feature that was evolved with the designing of the all-steel body, is the arrangement whereby the rear seat and all the rear upholstery can be quickly and easily removed and the whole rear compartment with 64 cubic feet of space made available for luggage or other merchandise. And it may be quickly changed back into an elegant equipage for passengers.

In a car of Dodge Brothers' best naturally been great public interest and many therefore will welcome the announcement that this first Dodge Brothers business sedan has just been placed on exhibition in the Boston showrooms of the Henshaw Motor Company, which will remain open evenings all of next week until nine p. m. to accommodate visitors.

TOURING CANADA ON THEIR HONEYMOON

Touring New York and Canada by automobile on their wedding trip today are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cook Waters, who were married on Wednesday in the Unitarian Church, at Winchester, by the Rev. George Reed.



Mrs. Henry Cook Waters.

The bride, who was Miss Constance Dow, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Dow, of No. 275 Main street, Winchester, is one of the most popular girls in the younger social set of that place. She was graduated from the Central School for Girls, at Orlando, Florida. Upon their return the young couple will make their home on the Fenway, avenue, Salem, where the bridegroom resides.

DOROTHY DOLAN IS B. U. JUNIOR HEAD

Miss Dorothy Donlan of Jamaica Plain, one of the most popular girls at the College of Business Administration of Boston University, has been elected secretary of the junior class of this department of this university. Miss Donlan is also considered one of the prettiest girls of her class. Other officers elected are as follows: President, Arthur Bushell of Malden; vice-president, Miss Francis Mc Bride of Palmer, who was co-author of "Zero," the musical comedy put on last year at the Boston University show; and treasurer, Edward Runne of Worcester.

LAUNCH CAMPAIGN FOR PALESTINE FUND

Rabbis and speakers representing the Keren Hayesod, or Palestine Foundation Fund, appeared at every synagogue in Greater Boston at the services at the Feast of Tabernacles to pave the way for their campaign, which they will launch on October 15, for the rehabilitation of Palestine. Greater Boston's share in this campaign has been placed at $250,000, and every effort of Jewish worshipper in the city is expected to contribute.

FIND MOONSHINERS' DEN IN THE WOODS

Fall River, Oct. 7.—A completely equipped moonshiners' den in the heart of the woods at Tiverton was discovered by the local police while searching for a chicken thief, John Ferdinand and Augusta Gonsales, both of this city, were arrested.

ASK MR. FIX-IT

Mr. Fix-It—My Ford is a 1922 model delivered in June and has 2,500 miles. The rings were put in by a fellow who used to work in a garage but now runs a place of his own on the side. He has put in the four sets of them for other models and they have given me no trouble at all. The valves were ground when they were put in the middle groove with a new Ford ring and at bottom and the ring fitted too. The valve seats had to be reamed out as there was a ridge at the top and bottom and some grooving. The motor is now on its second 500 miles and is as good if not better than the original. It runs smooth and knocks at times when starting are often being throttled down until it calms down. When the motor is cold I give it a couple of shots of gas by the carburetor and then start it, after giving spring enough to get a fair rate of speed, you throttle down the gas and disengage the clutch. When the motor is shut off, after it has been running for some time, the engine continues to run for some time from momentum. It sounds like the beating of steam when it is heating only not as loud. I am using Marathon Lt. Medium Oil. Must do this to the transmission you wanted and thanking you for your trouble, I am, Yours truly, Jerry Jones.

Jerry, it seems to have been just as all right. The only way we can suggest to stop this noise is to put in a new ring in the lower edge of the lower two grooves and drill two holes through this ring to allow gasoline to flow down for any distance. Then the ring will be free to move in the back of the groove and will not be so likely to stick. If the motor is smoking and the latest Ford pistons are causing trouble this way. Also be sure the oil above the upper pistons. If you hear the explosion of gas after the gas is shut off would indicate that the motor is running on the compression. Also if there is a sucking sound in the carburetor, which is nothing serious as it indicates a good suction which will keep the motor cool. When you slow down this motor and attempt to idle up too much retard your spark.

Dear Mr. Fix-It—Could you please tell me the trouble with my Ford rear end. It has a grind in it, a sort of grinding grind. Now this didn't grind until about a year ago. I have had it in a garage and they have taken it apart and put in new bearings and they will be out of line. If the grinding noise won't go away. It will cost me a lot of trouble and the gears will wear down. Would you please tell me what I can do to stop this noise, as I have no use for it as it is now. Thanking you, I am, Yours truly, Harry Middleton, Mass. A. M.

The Ford rear end has no provision for adjustment. When you put in new bearings you have to have the gears set up the same way they were before you started. Unless you put in new parts for a Ford rear end it is impossible to get it in alignment and they will be out of line. If the grinding noise won't go away it will cost you a lot of trouble and the gears will wear down. Would you please tell me what I can do to stop this noise, as I have no use for it as it is now. Thanking you, I am, Yours truly, Harry Middleton, Mass. A. M.

PEDESTRIANS SHOULD KNOW AUTO SIGNALS

Increasing use of automatic "Slow" and "Stop" signals is tending more and more to cause the automobile driver to neglect the use of the hand signal and thereby increase the chances for collisions on the highways, according to A. A. A. officials.

"The hand signal, after all, is the safest and most reliable," said M. O. Eldridge, Executive Secretary of the American Automobile Association.

"It is highly important that the pedestrian learn these signals as well as the automobile driver because knowledge of just what the automobilist intends to do at a specified corner will often save the pedestrian from harm.

R. R. ROSS JOINS CHEVROLET STAFF

R. R. Ross, a well-known figure in the automobile business in Boston, has been affiliating with the Silver-Chevrolet Company as retail sales manager. This is an important position in this "live wire" organization and W. C. Silby has been scouting for the right man for some time. In the new connection Mr. Ross, he has secured a man who has both experience and executive ability. He has been in the business for more than twenty years and knows the New England retail trade well.

ADD SPORT CAR AND CARAVAN TOUR TO OLDSMOBILE 1923 MODELS

"A sport roadster, mounted on the light wight chassis, has been added to the 1923 Oldsmobile models. This entirely new car, which will sell at $1625, embodies many new features in automotive equipment," says Harry Dunn, local manager for the Boston Oldsmobile Co.

"The body is finished in a new shade of green, with nickel trimmings, and vertical nickel rails on the rear deck serve to give it a distinctive appearance. Disc wheels have been used, with cowl lights and a cowl ventilator. Standard equipment will include windshield wings, spot light mounted under the left front headlight, aluminum steps, stop and parking light, cigar lighter, bumpers, windshield visor, double tire carrier, motometer, and a nickel windshield wiper.

"An entirely new feature of this car is a rack, mounted at the rear of the right hand step, for the carrying of a golf bag, and lights, set in either door, which automatically light when the door is opened to serve to illuminate the steps and interior of the car at night. These lights are operated from switches set in the door jam, which automatically shut the light off the minute the doors are closed."

35 CARS ENTERED FOR FLORIDA TOUR

Although entry blanks for the A. L. A. personally conducted tour to Florida were issued only last week, a vast number of inquiries have been received by the tour management. From present indications there will be over thirty-five cars in the tour this year.

L. von Lewinski, touring manager of the Automobile Legal Association, who was on the tour last year, states that the roads are now in much better condition than in 1921.

Arrangements are now being made with Captain Averill to take the management of the service car. Captain Averill was with the A. E. F. in charge of one of the repair bases in France.

Entry blanks, giving total costs, itinerary, and map of the route with various additional routes, may be had from the Scarborough Motor Guide Company of Boston.

NEW VIM TRUCK EASILY ADAPTABLE

A great deal of interest is being displayed by truck owners and buyers in the new Super Six Vim truck, as shown by the sales and deliveries made by the local Vim branch during the past week.

The sales indicate that the new Vim truck is being used in a wide variety of applications, which bears out the claim of this company that the new model is adapted to most any line and can be used in any business which requires at light truck.

HUGHES TO APPEAR IN LODGE CAMPAIGN

Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes will speak at Symphony Hall on the night of October 26 as a campaign speaker for U. S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

Vice-President Coolidge is expected to preside, while Senators Moses of New Hampshire and Curtis of Kansas also appear here in the interests of Senator Lodge.

Industrial Conference

An industrial conference will be held at the American House, Monday, with dinner at 6 p. m. under the auspices of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches. Representative employers and employes have been asked to be present and take part with the ministers present in the discussions.

CARAVAN TOUR TO FLORIDA IS SET FOR DEC. 6

The first annual motor tour for car owners and individuals who desire a motor tour to Florida, inaugurated by the George E. Marsters Tourist Agency, No. 248 Washington street, Boston, will leave Boston from the Public Library, Copley square, nine a. m., Wednesday, December 6.

The roads over which the tour will pass this year are to generally excellent condition and the route, from a scenic standpoint is a most interesting one. A service car will accompany the tour each day and will be equipped to make ordinary road repairs.

The touring limousine "Mohawk" will lead this caravan automobile tour. The "Mohawk" is a 19-passenger limousine put on the road this year by the Marsters Tourist Agency. It will accommodate a limited number of passengers, including any persons who may desire to ship their cars to Jacksonville, instead of driving them over the road.

REAL VALUE IN OAKLAND SEDAN

"The interest in closed cars this season surpasses that of any Fall in my recollection of the automobile business," said W. R. Sawyer, wholesale distributor for Oakland cars. "In a recent visit to the Brockton Fair, it was interesting to note that the Oakland Special Sedan was attracting marked attention at our booth. I am of the firm opinion that more and more closed cars will become the vogue. The utility of such a car is evident. The simplicity of window control is such that this no longer forms an objection to that type of car."

This Oakland Special Sedan offers so much real value for the money that our only regret is that we did not contract for more of these cars. They are a wonderful 'buy' and are meeting with a good reception since announced in Boston."

PLAYED NURSE WHILE WIFE WENT OUT WITH YOUNG MEN

BOARDERS TOO BUSY FOR SWAN

By GRACE DES CHAMPS.

But witness the grievance of Harold W. Swan in the Suffolk Superior Divorce Court over his wife's failure to sew the buttons on his [illegible]

It wasn't the only grievance Harold nursed against his wife. He had others, including her [illegible] preference for her mother's society to his and the presence of two [illegible] young roomers in the house. The last, it seems, were something of an economic expediency in view of the New Haven Railroad's failure to pay Harold more than $2.50 a day.

BLAMES ROOMERS

These grievances, together with a number of others, were aired before Judge Fox at the hearing on a [illegible] filed by Mrs. Swan for custody of their three children pending the outcome of divorce proceedings instituted by her against her husband.

The Swan triangle had an extra corner on it.

It wasn't one young roomer, Swan said, he had to contend with. It was two, namely, Paul Butler and Charles Haynes, both of Middleboro, and both [illegible] of the Swan household when the family occupied a $[illegible]-a-month apartment at No. 6 Royal street, Allston.

HELPED FAMILY BUDGET.

The two young men paid twelve dollars a week each for their board. Mrs. Swan and [illegible] joined the Swan outfit, Harold asserted, upon his own invitation in order to swell the family budget.

Swan told of his own ignominy when he stayed home evenings to take care of his children while his wife accompanied the roomers either to the movies or on an automobile ride.

But Swan failed to convince Judge Fox that his wife's conduct was sufficiently questionable to deny her temporary right to her children, and Mrs. Swan won the ruling on the motion.

WIFE SHOWS FEAR.

The disgruntled husband told on the witness stand of an attempt to gain entrance to his wife's flat in West Roxbury three days ago by describing himself as a bill collector when she refused to open the door for him. Later, he said, he had to turn his pockets inside out to convince his wife he didn't intend to shoot her or carve her.

"She finally went into the house with me," said the witness, "and I told her I loved her and pleaded with her to drop the divorce suit against me. She said: 'I can't go back, Harry; you've driven all my love for you out of my heart.'" Swan added with [illegible] that his mother-in-law put in an appearance [illegible] when he was just on the point of patching things up with his wife.

TELLS OF SWAN'S THREAT.

Mrs. Bessie Chandler, Mrs. Swan's mother, declared that she came to her daughter's flat that evening upon the latter's request. Among other startling things she declared her son-in-law had said in her presence, was the following addressed to his wife:

"I'll put my heel in your heart and turn it around. I'll squeeze your very heart through the children."

Mrs. Swan, an extremely attractive young matron, testified that her husband had abused her verbally and otherwise. She [illegible] [illegible] with her roomers.

Back Bay Society Man to Take New York Bride Next Month, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

BOSTON-NEW YORK alliances, matrimonially speaking, are fast becoming more numerous than Boston-Boston alliances among the famed "four hundred."

William De Ford Beal, son of the Thomas Prince Beals of Gloucester street, is only one of the many Hub men seeking Gotham brides. His marriage to Miss Beatrice Starr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Morris Starr of East Seventieth street, will be solemnized November 17 in the Central Presbyterian Church of New York, and will be followed by a reception at Sherry's.

It's rather interesting to note that William Beal's older brother, Tommy Prince Beal, Jr., also elected to "love, honor and obey" one of Gotham's maids. It was only a little over a year ago that his marriage to Miss May Morgan of New York and Shelburne, Vt., took place at the country home of the bride's parents on Lake Champlain. Since their marriage the Tommy Beals, Jr., have been living on Lawrence road, Chestnut Hill. Which reminds me that the former Miss Morgan will help next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday when society folk take over Jay's gown shop for charity.

William De Ford Beal, a Harvard '11 man, has a notable list of club holdings, including the Somerset, Tennis and Racquet, and Harvard of New York. His father is a member of the Harvard '69 class, and his brother of the '04 class.

ELEONORA SEARS, or "Eleo" as she is more familiarly known, is a good deal of a traveler. One day you hear she's at Wimbledon, England, for the tennis matches, a little later and she's visiting at somebody's chateau in Southern France, and then again she may be at the North Shore, where she has a place at Beverly Farms.

Just now she's gone over to New York for one of her frequent visits, and the other day she entertained a group of friends at luncheon at the Plaza. During the past season the North Shore saw quite a bit of its "Eleo" after she returned from rather extensive travels abroad.

MISS SYBIL APPLETON, daughter of Mrs. Randolph Morgan Appleton, is to be in the very attractive bridesmaids' group which will attend Miss Miriam Fenno at the latter's wedding to John Simpkins on the 21st of the month.

Speaking of weddings reminds me that I heard the other day that Miss Rose Fessenden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sewall Fessenden, will not become the bride of Edward L. Bigelow on the last Saturday of the month, as was previously announced.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE RICHMOND FEARING of Beacon street are spending a few days in Newport, where they are stopping at the Muenchinger King.

THAT popular young couple, the Horatio Nelson Slaters (May Lyon) have joined the gay Autumn colony at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia. Since their marriage last December at Versailles, France, young Slater—he is of the Harvard '16 class—and his bride have done some considerable globe trotting. It was not until the late Spring that they returned to New York following their extensive wedding journey through the Orient.

Mrs. Slater is an enthusiastic tennis player, and since her arrival at the Springs she has spent quite a bit of her time on the courts of the Casino. Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Chalifoux of Commonwealth avenue and Pride's Crossing have also arrived at White Sulphur Springs.

MRS. QUINCY ADAMS SHAW, 2d, of Boston and the North Shore has been staying for a few days in New York, where she is registered at the Hotel Plaza.

J. TORREY MORSE, JR., of Fairfield street is another of the Bostonians visiting in New York. The other night he gave a dinner party at Pierre's, where his guests included Mrs. Frederick Martin Davies, Mrs. Edward Van Ingen and Lawrence Bell Van Ingen.

GENEVA MITCHELL TELLS COURT OF BROKEN ROMANCE

Runaway Flapper Gives Father the Slip

DRESSED IN PALE BLUE KNICKERS

New Hampshire Girl Escapes From Parent at North Station

The girl is clad in pale-blue nickers. Police of the Back Bay and downtown stations are searching for her, believing that she may have fallen into the hands of white slavers.

The search was begun after Frederick L. Wheeler, a letter carrier of Concord, N. H., had complained to police of the City Hall avenue station that his daughter, Winifred L. Wheeler had disappeared while waiting with him to entrain for their home in Concord.

FOND OF DISAPPEARING.

According to the story told the police by Mr. Wheeler, the girl possesses an uncomfortable habit of disappearing at inopportune moments. Winifred had been missing for several days and Mr. Wheeler learned that she was in Milton. Obtaining leave from the Concord post office the father left on the first train for Boston and located his missing daughter at Milton.

BOUGHT HER FINERY.

In order to win her to his view that she should go home, Mr. Wheeler took his daughter on a tour of the shopping district, buying her clothing and finery. Following this both attended a matinee. Later both were in the North Station waiting room ready to entrain for Concord. The disappearing flapper excused herself to her father saying she would go to the women's room and return immediately. She went.

FEARS SEDUCERS.

Some hours after this episode the father entered City Hall avenue police station and reported the girl as missing. He told the police that he feared that such a young girl might easily fall the prey of seducers and asked to be notified immediately on their finding Winifred. Winifred is sixteen years old, weighs 125 pounds, has bobbed blonde hair, light blue eyes and wears tortoise shell glasses, a gray blue felt "flapper" hat and knickers and waist.

TWO CHILDREN AWAIT ELOPER'S RETURN

WIFE, CHILDREN AND FATHER
Mrs. Leo Forgeron, Newton woman, who charges her missing husband (lower inset) was lured away by a Watertown school teacher. The two children, Lillian, nine years old (top inset), and Marie, eleven years old (centre inset), have shown athletic ability and won many prizes at the Bigelow School

DESERTED WIFE WILLING TO FORGIVE

Two little girls, who can't understand why "daddy" has been away from home so long, are eagerly awaiting the return of Leo Forgeron to his house at No. 7 Channing street, Newton.

Forgeron has not been seen since he left town last July. His wife charges he went away with Miss Helen N. Hicks of Watertown, deserting her and his four children.

The children, however, do not know why he went away. Forgeron was always their hero—a big, strong daddy who always greeted them with a smile and a kiss when he came home at night, and who was always ready to toss aside the evening paper to tell them stories and play with them.

And when he went away, leaving his little wife to take care of the children all alone, Mrs. Forgeron, to whom he had also been a hero, did not tell the children what had happened.

"Daddy has gone West to work on a railroad," she said. "He'll come back some day."

And if Forgeron comes home, his wife, as well as his children, will give him a warm welcome. Mrs. Forgeron still loves him, she says, and is willing to take him back. She does not blame him for going away.

"He didn't have a chance," she says. "That woman wouldn't leave him alone. He didn't mean any harm. If she hadn't kept after him all the time, he would never have left us. If he knew what financial circumstances we are in, he'd leave her and come back to us. He was always a good husband and father."

GOT FELLOW-COPS, OUT HIMSELF

Leslie Martin, policeman extraordinary, is no longer a member of the Malden police department. He was ordered to turn in his badge to Police Commissioner Stevens today.

Martin, who was a probationary reserveman, leaped into the limelight when he corraled four brother officers and put them in the cooler for joyriding when they should have been on their beats. Each was found guilty and suspended for five days.

Scarcely forty-eight hours later Martin was sought on his own beat. He had disappeared. After a hue and cry he was found in a drug store half a mile from his post.

His six months' probationary period as reserveman was completed today. When Commissioner Stevens did not appoint him to a regular position he automatically lost his membership in the Malden police department.

DEATH BED CONTRACT IN SUIT

Annie Dana Says John Cuneo Promised Her $20 a Week for Life and Died Next Day

Suit for $25,000, alleging violation of a death-bed contract, was filed by Annie E. Dana against the estate of John Cuneo in Suffolk County Court today. The individual named in the suit is William Cuneo, administrator of John Cuneo's estate.

Miss Dana alleges that in 1903 Cuneo promised to marry her and continually repeated the promise, though he never carried out his contract. On September 15, 1921, she alleges that Cuneo, as amends for not marrying her, contracted to pay her $20 per week for the rest of her life. Cuneo died the next day.

She claims that William Cuneo offered to settle for $500, but she refused this, and since then he has not lived up to the death bed contract. She was represented by the law firm Stone & Stone, No. 27 State street.

FIFTH FIRE IS SET IN MILTON

Arrest Is Expected Soon, Occupants of Tenement Being Panic-Stricken

The police announced today that within the next twenty-four hours they would arrest the person believed to be responsible for the incendiary fires which have taken place in the tenement house at No. 12 Branch street, Milton.

The announcement was made after a fifth fire was discovered early today. The five have taken place within a week.

The blaze was extinguished by firemen who quieted the panicky tenants. There are several children in the house.

The first fire followed a religious quarrel between Mrs. Anna Ribben, owner of the property, and Mrs. Harold McDonald, a tenant. Mrs. McDonald was ordered to vacate the property within forty-eight hours. She appealed to the Housing Commission and was told she did not have to move.

The top floor of the house is occupied by Patrolman Miles Gibbons. In the previous fires his infant son John was endangered by the flames.

In every instance there was evidence the fire was started with incendiary purpose.

Incendiary Hunted After Revere Fire

Fire, believed to have been set by the firebug who has been terrorizing the Malden-Revere line district, destroyed the barn of John Phinney, No. 51 Bryant street, Revere, early today. Phinney with the help of neighbors led five horses and six cows to safety, but the barn and six tons of hay were wiped out. The loss was estimated at $3,000.

The police of Revere joined today with the Malden department in the search for the firebug.

GIRL ASKS COURT TO GIVE HER DIVORCE

Letter of Youthful Husband Planning Wedding Introduced in Court

Geneva Mitchell, former Ziegfeld "Frolic" chorus girl, who was dropped from the "Sally" show while that was in Boston last Spring following a hilarious party in Commonwealth avenue, may be legally separated from her youthful husband, Robert Savage, of Yale, in a few days.

MARRIAGE OPPOSED.

[illegible] New York [illegible] Geneva [illegible] first came into prominence last March when she and Savage [illegible] left New York and went up to Milford [illegible], where they were married. After living together for only one day they separated. Savage's subsequent efforts at a reconciliation [illegible] fruitless.

PROBE SHOOTING OF SPECIAL OFFICER

Springfield, Oct. 7.—Police today began an investigation into the facts surrounding the shooting of Patrolman William C. Sullivan by two other patrolmen, John E. Sullivan and Frank LaVoice.

In the report of the two latter officers to Chief Quilty they say that William Sullivan, while off duty and in citizen's clothes, chased another man down Bridge street after a rough and tumble fight, shooting as he ran.

The two officers who did not recognize Sullivan, called on him to stop, and fired at him when he continued running. William Sullivan has not yet submitted his report of the affair as he is confined to a sick bed.

MAYOR QUIGLEY OF CHELSEA IMPROVED

WEATHER MAY RESCUE THE YANKEE WRECK

The Huggins assault has crumbled before a dose of finely planned and splendidly executed hurling. To put it briefly, the Yanks have been slow balled to death.

Opposed to that, the Giants are pegging away at the really good A. L. pitching. They make the hit and run work now and then; they are always going on the bases, and consequently worrying the fielders. Ward's disastrous kick in the second, or third, game was due to the fact that he was hurrying.

MAYS MAY PITCH.

Carl Mays still has to show and we ... an idea that he may be impressed into service today, although the exigencies of the occasion cry loudly for Bush, best pitcher of the year. Only the box score will convince us that Joseph can lick the Giants.

He hasn't a curve that's dangerous and the McGraws are a great bunch of fast ball hitters. Kelly is the only wild swinger on the club. The rest of them take the sharp snappy cut that renders speed useless. Kelly, a great hitter in seasonal games, continues to be a bust in this series. But the rest of the club is making up for his deficiencies, and George is a real whale in the field.

Art Nehf was McGraw's logical choice for this third, or fourth game, and it was his turn to win ... Against a club that is straining to hit, Arthur is bad medicine. And he ... lay

All season long the Giants have been ... flocks of ... lack of ... With the good chucking they are getting these balmy days, they're one whale of a ball club. It's our belief that the Yanks underrated them badly and are suffering now from realization of that fact.

The Giants in four straight is now the talk around New York, for it seems dollars to doughnuts that Manager McGraw will send back Art Nehf against the Yankees this afternoon and ... almost certain to ... Joe Bush. The Giants must win two more games while the Yankees must win four straight to win. The Giants are 10 to 7 favorites now and will rule at 3 to 1 before the game starts.

Jack Scott, sold by the Braves ... Winter, fired by the Reds this Spring, ... a World Series hero ... the Yankees 3 to 0 ... and the ... in a box, ... and thought a lot of strange things. Pat Moran ...

Today you know that the old Brave pitched one of the finest of World's Series games, shut out the Yanks with four hits, 3 to 0, and gave the Giants an edge that seems inseparable in this '22 World's Series.

Jack flailed his long arms around his head grotesquely, twisted his great body in ridiculous contortions, and poured the baseball over the plate and around the Yankee bats, with bewildering speed.

An outcast a few months ago, Jack has now joined the ranks of the mighty. He's up there with Christy Mathewson, who chucked ... as the lank Carolinian mowed down the lusty hostile swatters with Bill Dinneen and Dick ... Richard Rudolph and Ed Plank and the other heroes of baseball ... aftermath.

And Pat Moran, a frown smeared over his ruddy countenance, watched it all and thought those things we have referred to. A ... of ... fancies as the game wore on to its inevitable Giant triumph would make a remarkably ... document.

... Jack Scott was a baseball exile, no later than last April. He was traded by the Braves to Cincinnati during the Winter. He reported in the Spring and developed a sore arm. Some doctor examined the wing and declared that Jack would never pitch again. We hope the doc was there yesterday.

Anyhow, Pat Moran accepted the medico's verdict, and Scott was released in a hurry. The Reds would not take a chance on paying the big farmer a couple of months' salary. Jack knew ... but nobody around Cincinnati believed him.

The other clubs naturally wouldn't invest and the pitcher was put on the release list. He was passed up, lifted out of the picture, and went home. He worked with his wing slowly and carefully. The strength began to return, he felt like putting something on the ball.

Needed Treatment and Had McGraw Stand For It

He needed expensive treatment, though, before he could cut loose. He put the matter up to a couple of managers and didn't get anywhere. Then he talked to McGraw, ... good pitchers.

Mac listened as he always does. He was convinced ... side chance of the ... He told Scott to ... everything and the New York club would foot the bill. ... Giants a little more than ... and one other thing.

... Scott was able to pitch again in August and yesterday proved that the $7... was the ... the remarkable ... ever made.

Declare Jack Never Pitched One Really Bad Ball

Veterans like Matty, who watched the game, declared that Jack never pitched one really bad ball all the way. He never gave the batters a good one to hit. He was weaving the ball across their knees or sweeping over the outside corner of the platter all the time. The ... leather and yarn sphere was remarkably obedient.

It went just where he willed. Babe Ruth hit three puny grounders. Bob Meusel scratched a ... Wally Schang ... the nose, but Wally does that to most any pitcher. Hoyt and Pipp connected for regular singles, but it was evident that Jack could have gone on blanking the Yankees indefinitely if he had to. When Bancroft ended the game with a couple of dandy stops, the whole Giant team rushed after Jack and nearly broke his back with their congratulatory wallops.

The f... in the centre field bleachers yelled themselves hoarse as he trotted lumberingly through the gate out that way. He's quite a bird here in New York, now is Jack, and he can win another game in this series if he must.

Luck Returns in Double Measure for Him Now

Fate made life bleak in prospect for him this Spring. Now luck has returned in double measure. Jack wasn't even nominated to chuck that game. Hughie McQuillan was McGraw's selection, but Hughie didn't have his real zipp on the ball warming up and Scott was rushed to the breach. We'll say he filled it. Some pitcher, Jack.

The nemesis that was on Hoyt's trail a year ago ... Waite was hit a lot, and never had a chance to win, but he turned in a good ball game, none the less. The Giants deserved one run. But the two they knocked off in the third, the pair that established fully the confidence built up by Scott's grand start, were a gift from the well-known gods of the game.

Aaron Ward kicked a grounder that should have been turned into ... Frisch ... boated out a long fly, Irish Meusel, one dangerous and courageous bird with the bludgeon, smacked a hit into right, and there was your old ball game.

Groh and Frisch combined on shots after a walk to Bancroft in the seventh and made the result doubly sure. And that run was the only one that should have scored.

The Fordham flash, chunky, bottle-legged Heinie and the complacent Irish Meusel continue to be the heroes.

The Yanks will dream about that redoubtable trio all Winter.

The American Leaguers made their first error and it was fearfully and awfully fatal. Frank Frisch kicked one ball but turned the boot into an ... out at third, with little ... big Babe rolling around the scenery. Otherwise the Giants looked like the greatest ball club in captivity, as they are when their pitching is good, and we'll say it was good.

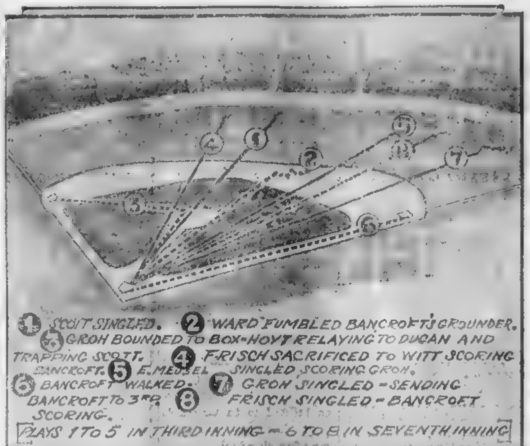
How the Runs Were Scored in Third Title Game



Giants Again in Today's Game

By THE CRYSTAL GAZER.

Somebody stabbed the needle into the old crystal. Not even the stars knew that Jack Scott could do it. This sure was correct, but the teams were mixed up, that's all.

This is another day. The planet McGraw is now in ascendancy and a Huggins eclipse is due any time. If you bet on the Giants, you're lucky. Only unexpected aerial disturbance can stop them now.

A man named Nehf will come into great things this afternoon. It will be another tough session for a youth called Bush. The Giants will win their third straight.

The score will be:

WESLEYAN LOOKS FOR VICTORY TODAY

Middletown, Ct., Oct. 7.—Coach Martin has the Wesleyan eleven well groomed for its hard tackle with Bowdoin. The victory over Union last week showed that Wesleyan has a stronger team than in several years. The backfield is very fast. The undergraduates look for a victory over the Maine boys.

Wesleyan will probably start the game with King and Conway, ends; Captain Smith and Lagauke, tackles; ... and ..., guards; Allison, centre; Robinson, quarterback; Fricke and Adams, halfbacks, Newhall, fullback.

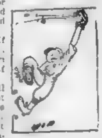
Trial of Montgomery S. Gibson, president and treasurer, on larceny charges, is scheduled for October 18. It is claimed the concern is $100,000 short.

YANKS' HEAVY BATTERS NOT IN THE RUNNING

By SID MERCER.

New York, Oct. 7.—After three days of manouvering the World's Series is beginning to settle into definite National League lines. Yesterday's game, regarded by the players as the most important of the series in establishing a favorite, was a great victory for the Giants. It developed in Jack Scott, the third dependable pitcher McGraw has been seeking, and it went far to shatter the morale of the Yankees.



McGraw was obliged to gamble with Scott. If he had lost the Yankees would have ... favorites. Today he can gamble with McQuillan or Jonnard or Ryan and still be sitting pretty if he loses.

The probabilities are, however, that he will elect to follow up his advantage with his best pitchers and deal another smashing blow at the American leaguers. For that reason the general opinion among the wiseacres is that he will shoot Arthur Nehf back at the Yankees, and in all probability Joe Bush will be another repeater.

There wasn't much to choose between Nehf and Bush in the opening game. Both were good as long as they opposed each other. Nehf was a loser when he quit the game, but Bush did not fail until after Nehf's departure.

Miller Huggins can not afford to pitch anybody except Bush today. McGraw is in a position to give Nehf an extra day of rest, but if Huggins chooses to extend Bush's vacation to three days he must start Carl Mays this afternoon. Mays can pitch, but he hasn't been a winner this season, and the weight of his hard luck bears heavily on his peculiar disposition.

So far Huggins has not had to camouflage his pitching selections. He announced Bush three days before the opening game.

May Be Some Jockeying, as the Yankees Are Home Team

There may be some jockeying today. The Yankees are the home team and Huggins must name his pitcher first. It wouldn't be a surprise if McGraw picked McQuillan if Huggins starts Mays. If Nehf is the nominee Huggins is not likely to choose Mays.

The situation this morning is a desperate one for the Yankees. Only marvelous pitching and a sudden break in the batting slump that has handcuffed the Yanks since their triumphant return from the western trip, can overcome the two game lead of the Giants. They have had the pitching so far but their batting has been pitiful.

The Yankees must win four of the next five to stave off defeat while the Giants need only two of the next five to hold their World's championship.

The Giants performed the remarkable feat of winning five out of six. The Yankees need four out of five. That does not seem to be so difficult as the task that confronted the Giants but considering the way the two teams are playing it is almost an impossibility.

So far, the Giants have out-hit, out-fielded, out-pitched, out-gamed and out-strategied their American League rivals. If they lose now it will be the most amazing reversal of form ever seen in baseball.

Excellent Defensive Game of First Two Days Missing

The excellent defensive baseball played by both teams in the first two games was missing yesterday. The Yankees break down in an early inning when Ward's boot costs the winning runs. The Giants were not compelled to show much in the field because the Yankee batsmen gave them few difficult chances. They were steady, though, at all times, and the only error was turned into a play that stopped a Yankee rally.

From the standpoint of thrilling situations this game did not compare with the first two. The high spot of the combat was the seventh inning rally of the American Leaguers. They placed the tying runs on second and third bases with ... and ...

Jack Scott Got His First Chance as a Pirate

The success of Jack Scott in the third game of the World's Series reads like a chapter out of a novel. Jack first got his big league chance in 1916 with the Pirates under Manager Jimmy Callahan. He was bought from a Southern club, but Cap Neal, the Pittsburgh scout, spoke of the Tarheel only as a prospect, but not quite ready for the big show. He didn't "do" and was sent to the Birmingham club of the Southern Association. Manager Carleton Molesworth developed him into a good pitcher and then he had his trial with the Braves. He excited Manager George Stallings' wrath on more than one occasion and had all kinds of bad luck. He almost lost his hand once in an accident. He was the most emerald of greenhorns when he got his first big league show with the Braves in 1918, but even then insisted that some day he would be a major league star pitcher and shine for the crowds that would gather on the Polo Grounds.

DODGE BROTHERS BUSINESS SEDAN

They have combined open car ruggedness with closed car protection and smartness.

They have demonstrated, once for all, that a sedan can be as practical and almost as inexpensive as an open touring car.

The body is built of hand-welded steel because steel is sturdy, and will take a permanent, oven-baked finish, eliminating forever the cost of repainting.

The seats are upholstered in attractive, genuine Spanish blue leather, because leather will wash and [redacted]

To further enlarge the car's usefulness, the rear seat, back and side cushions, seat frame and foot rest are quickly removable, giving sixty-four cubic feet of flat loading space in the rear compartment. The manifold uses made possible by this unique feature are readily imagined.

The top and rear quarters are of non-rumble, fabric construction, conforming with the present attractive vogue. From cord tires to curtain cords, the fittings, inside and out, are distinctive and complete.

In fact, every detail of the car emphasizes its striking adaptability to business as well as social use.

45,000 CROWD STADIUM TO SEE HARVARD-HOLY CROSS GAME

CRIMSON PICKED TO DEFEAT PURPLE

Harvard Stadium, Oct 7—Harvard versus Holy Cross, the early season football treat on the Crimson grid schedule, will be watched by the greatest early season gathering ever to appear at the Stadium

Upward of 40,000 tickets were disposed of two days ago and the late applicants are expected to fill the cement and wooden seats of the Cambridge horseshoe to capacity

For the past two years these teams have furnished remarkably thrilling battles with Harvard, in each instance, nosing out a 3 to 0 victory, but with Holy Cross holding the advantage in ground gained and in the impressiveness of its play.

Many anticipate an equally close [illegible] this afternoon and not a few [illegible] for a Holy Cross triumph. This year the Purple has had two preliminary trials whereas on other years it has come to the Stadium without such tests. While Coach O'Donnell's team appeared none too impressive against its early opponents it won both battles with com[illegible] ease and is reported fit for [illegible] fray.

After a month of intensive training the Boston College Eagle will be set loose this afternoon against Boston University at Braves Field. The contest between the two local elevens shares in interest with the battle at the Stadium between Holy Cross and Harvard. Boston University is more anxious to win today's game than to win any other game on its schedule, while Coach Cavanaugh's gridmen are equally anxious to start off the season with a victory.

Although the Maroon and Gold eleven appeared stronger this season in practice today's game will be the first [illegible] test of the reorganized team. The B. C. backfield looks even stronger than the backfield of last Fall. With [illegible] Darling, Ward, Cronin and Kelleher there is [illegible] to worry about as far as [illegible] are concerned.

The line presented a problem to Cavanaugh and by shifting his regulars and introducing new [illegible] the Eagle coach feels that he has bolstered up the B. C. defence. Heaphy is the big improvement in the line. After a year's layoff, it will be interesting to watch the work of the Eagle's pivot man. His playing in the recent scrimmages showed that Heaphy still has the stuff that won him a place on the mythical All-American eleven two years ago and Jack feels that his last year at the Heights will be his biggest.

Another new man who will appear in the B. C. lineup is O'Connell, the Eagle right wing. O'Connell is a heavy and speedy end who has rapidly developed under Cavanaugh's [illegible] and his first appearance will be carefully studied.

Boston College depends on the power of its backfield to crush the B. U. defence. The Back Bay line did not appear by any means [illegible] in the contest with Colby last week, and unless it has been greatly strengthened in the last few days it will not be able to hold against the onslaughts of the Eagle backfield.

Although the strength of the B. C. line has not yet been tried, it seems stronger than that of its rival. However, the B. U. backfield, composed of regulars of last season, may prove to be too much of a worry to the B. C. line as the B. C. backfield is expected to prove against B. U.'s line.

Whelton will probably call the signals for B. U. Levenson has been returned to centre. Tonry, the B. U. fullback, has showed much vigor in his line plunging and will probably be the most troublesome member of the opposition.

It is probable that Darling and Cochrane will engage in a punting duel, with the odds in favor of B. C.'s big board quarterback.

In general both teams have strong backfields with relatively weak lines. The team with the stronger backfield will carry off the laurels and from the strength of the teams as judged on paper, B. C. seems to have the edge.

DEMPSEY-THOMPSON IN FANEUIL FEATURE

By JACK CONWAY

Jack Dempsey, who doesn't require a World's Series to prove he is the class at his own particular game, is in our midst today. Picking winners of World's Series games is easy compared to trying to dope out who is going to win the ten-round bout between Eddie Shevlin and Dave Shade at the Boston Arena next Monday night, according to Jack Conway

Happy, who has twice gone down with the dear old Yanks, is the corroborating witness

The winner of Monday night's quarrel will be in line to get a tussle with the champion

Who will win, Shevlin or Shade?

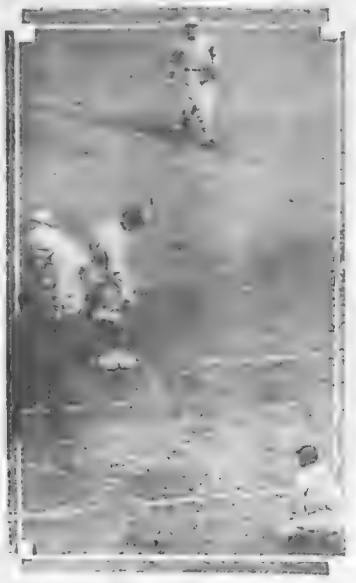
PICTORIAL HIGH LIGHTS OF THIRD GAME IN WORLD'S SERIES

REMARKABLE ACTION PICTURE OF FIRST DOUBLE PLAY IN SECOND GAME OF series. Bancroft bunted and Hoyt grabbed it and outran him to first in the first inning. Groh singled through right field. Frisch then drove a hot one into centre field. Groh, playing well off first, made for second and stopped there. Frisch tried to stretch it into a double, but Emil Meusel lined to W.a.d, who made a neat catch and whipped the ball to Pipp before Frisch could get back. The play is shown above. (International News Reel)



WITT STARTS THE BALL ROLLING BUT COMES TO grief at first! The Yankee's centre fielder sent a smart grounder to Scott, Giant's hurler, and the latter threw him out, although it was a close decision. This occurred in the first. Photo shows the play. Dugan, who followed Witt, flied to Young and then the mighty Babe struck out—retiring the Yanks for the inning. (International News Reel)

WALLY PIPP CLOUTS THE BALL FOR A SINGLE IN THE SECOND INNING! THE Yankee's first sacker, first up in the second, popped one past Frisch. The photo shows him just at the moment he started his sprint for first. R. Meusel then lifted a fly to Kelly. Schang flied to Cunningham out in the centre field territory. Pipp stole second on Sa[illegible] Ward's out by Bancroft on a fly. (International News Reel)

Lillian Peddle, in circle, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Peddle of No. 68 Prospect avenue, Chelsea, failed to observe the big truck coming down Washington avenue, near Woodlawn avenue, Chelsea, and she pitched under the rear wheels of the vehicle, the rear wheel of which passed over her head. Leo Saltsman, Chelsea, drove the truck.

BUSTER BROWN GETS THE KEY TO THE CITY! Buster and his pup, "Tige," the same pair that used to cut up such antics are paying Boston the first visit in several years. They spent a pleasant half hour with the Mayor and received the inevitable key. Buster has travelled 70,000 miles in the past year. Note the natty cap worn by "Tige."

This Day in Our History—October 7, 1922

THIS is the anniversary of the death, in 1849, of Edgar Allan Poe, regarded as America's foremost poet. Poe's short stories placed him also in the front rank of short story writers. His fame spread to Europe.

When Knighthood Was in Flower

by Charles Major

READ IT AGAIN!

Start This World-Famous Story Today

The story opens with an account of the Caskoden family, one of whom, Edwin—who tells the story of Princess Mary Tudor and Charles Brandon—holds a place at the court of Henry VIII. News of a terrible duel reaches the King. Of four combatants, only two come out alive, one so horribly disfigured that he might better have been killed. The survivor, Charles Brandon, is much talked about for his heroism. He appears at a tourney at Westminster. Mary begs the King to tell her his name. He refuses. Brandon meets Caskoden in London and they become friends. Brandon tells him his hopes and plans.

Princess Mary Tudor (Marion Davies) takes a lesson in dancing from Charles Brandon, while Lady Jane plays and Edwin looks on. To be shown at Park Theatre, October 23.

WHEN I open my mouth for public utterance, the king is the best man in Christendom, and his premier peer of the realm the next best. When the king is a Catholic I go to mass; since, praised be the Lord, I have brains enough not to let my head interfere with the set ways of a stone wall.

Now, when Mary returned the whole court rejoiced, and I was anxious for Brandon to meet her and that they should become friends. There would be no trouble in bringing this meeting about, since, as you know, I was upon terms of intimate friendship with Mary, and was the avowed, and, as I thought, at least hoped, all but accepted lover of her first lady in waiting and dearest friend, Lady Jane Bolingbroke. Brandon, it is true, was not noble; not even an English knight, while I was both knighted and noble; but he was of as old a family as England ... and near of him to some ... in the land.

don?" said Lady Jane, holding out her plump little hand, so white and soft, and dear to me. "I have heard something of you the last day or so from Sir Edwin, but had begun to fear he was not going to give me the pleasure of knowing you. I hope I may see you often now, and that I may present you to my mistress."

With this, her eyes, bright as overgrown dewdrops, twinkled with a mischievous little smile, as if to say: "Ah, another large handsome fellow to make a fool of himself."

Brandon acquiesced in the wish she had made, and, after the interchange of a few words, Jane ... her mistress was waiting at ... her side of the grounds, and ... she must go. She then ran ... with a laugh and a curtsey, ... was soon lost to sight be... the shrubbery at the turning ... walk.

... short time we came to a ... house near the marble boat-landing, where we found the queen and some of her ladies awaiting the rest of their party for a trip down the river, which had been planned the day before. Brandon was known to the queen and several of the ladies, although he had not been formally presented at an audience.

Many of the king's friends enjoyed a considerable intimacy with the whole court without ever receiving the public stamp of recognition, socially, which goes with a formal presentation.

The queen, seeing us, sent me off to bring the king. After I had gone, she asked if any one had seen the Princess Mary, and Brandon told her Lady Jane had said she was at the other side of the grounds. Thereupon her majesty asked Brandon to find the Princess and to say that she was wanted.

Brandon started off and soon found a bevy of girls sitting on some benches under a spreading oak, weaving spring flowers. He had never seen the princess, he could not possibly know her. As a matter of fact, he did not know her, for she could not be mistaken among a thousand—there was no one like her or anything near it. Some stubborn spirit of opposition, however, prompted him to pretend ignorance. All that he had heard of her wonderful power over men, and the servile manner in which they fell before her, had aroused in him a spirit of antagonism, and had begotten a kind of distaste beforehand. He was wrong in this, because Mary was not a coquette in any sense of the word, and did absolutely nothing to attract men, except to be so beautiful, sweet and winning that they could not let her alone; for all of which surely the prince of fault-finders himself could in no way blame her.

She could not help that God had seen fit to make her the fairest being on earth, and the responsibility would have to lie where it belonged—with God; Mary would have none of it. Her attractiveness was not a matter of volition or intention on her part. She was too young for deliberate snare-setting—though it often begins very early in life—and made no effort to attract men.

Man's love was too cheap a thing for her to strive for, and I am sure, in her heart, she would infinitely have preferred to live without it—that is, until the right one should come.

The right one is always on his way, and, first or last, is sure to come to every woman—sometimes, alas! too late—and when he comes, be it late or early, she crowns him, even though he be a long-eared ass. Blessed crown and thrice-blessed blindness—else there were fewer coronations.

So Brandon stirred this antagonism and determined not to see her manifold perfections, which he felt sure were exaggerated; but to treat her as he would the queen—who was black and leathery enough to frighten a satyr—with all respect due to her rank, but with his own opinion of her nevertheless, safely stored away in the back of his head.

Coming up to the group, Brandon took off his hat, and, with a graceful little bow that let the curls fall around his face, asked: "Have I the honor to find the Princess Mary among these ladies?"

Mary, who I know you will at once say was thoroughly spoiled, without turning her face toward him, replied:

"Is the Princess Mary a person of so little consequence about the court that she is not known to a mighty captain of the guard?"

He wore his guardsman's doublet, and she knew his rank by his uniform. She had not noticed his face.

Quick as a flash came the answer: "I cannot say of what consequence the Princess Mary is about the court; it is not my place to determine such matters. I am sure, however, she is not here, for I doubt not she would have given a gentle answer to a message from the queen. I shall continue my search." With this, he turned to leave, and the ladies, including Jane, who was there and saw it all and told me of it, awaited the bolt they knew would come, for they saw the lightning gathering in Mary's eyes.

Mary sprang to her feet with an angry flush in her face, exclaiming: "Insolent fellow, I am the Princess Mary; if you have a message, deliver it and be gone." You may be sure this sort of treatment was not such as the cool-headed, daring Brandon would repay with usury; so, turning upon his heel and almost presenting his back to Mary, he spoke to Lady Jane:

"No need to repeat the message, Jane," cried Mary. "I have ears and can hear for myself." Then turning to Brandon: "If your insolence will permit you to receive a message from so insignificant a person as the king's sister, I beg you to say to the queen that I shall be with her presently."

"May I ask your ladyship further to say for me that if I have been guilty of any discourtesy I greatly regret it. My failure to recognize the Princess Mary grew out of my misfortune in never having been allowed to bask in the light of her countenance."

What Has Gone Before

Sir Nicholas Thormonde, a wealthy Englishman, wounded and blinded in one eye in action, starts writing his diary in Paris while the war is still on. He is sick of life. The war has robbed it of all that a young man can find of joy. He tries to amuse himself in the company of several women friends, who, he feels, seek his company for his money and not for the love he craves. He starts to write a book and hires a typist, Miss Sharp. He falls in love with her and serves notice on the "Fluffies." She refuses to give him her address.

"You are not thinking of leaving Paris, I hope, when you move?" I said as we drank coffee. "I am going to begin another book directly this one is finished."

"It is not yet decided," she answered abruptly.

"I could not write without you," Silence.

"I would love to think that you took an interest in teaching me how to be an author——"

The faintest shrug of the shoulders——

"You don't take any interest?"

"No."

"Are not you very unkind?"

"No—If you have anything to complain of in my work I will listen attentively and try and alter it."

"No."

"Why?"

"Why should I?"

"I must be grateful even that you ask a question, I suppose—Well, I don't know quite myself why you should—You think I am a rotter—You despise my character—you think my life is wasted and that—or—I have undesirable friends."

Silence.

"Miss Sharp! you drive me crazy never answering—I can't think why you like to be so provoking!" I was stung to exasperation.

"Sir Nicholas," and she put down her cup with displeasure, "if you will not keep to the subject of work—I am sorry, but I cannot stay as your secretary."

Terror seized me——

"I shall have to if you insist upon it, I suppose, but I am longing to be friends with you—and I can't think why you should resent it so. We are both Englishman, we are both—unhappy—we are both lonely——"

Silence!

"Somehow I don't feel it is altogether because I am a revolting object to look at that you are so unkind. You must have seen lots like me since the war——"

"I am not unkind. I think you are. May I go to my work now?"

We rose from the table. And for a second he was so near to me the pent-up desire of weeks mastered me and the tantalization of the morning overcame me so that a frantic temptation seized me—I could not resist it. I put out one arm while I steadied myself with the other by the back of a chair, and I drew her tiny body towards me and pressed my lips to her cupid's bow of a mouth. And, oh, God, the pleasure of it—right or wrong!

She went dead white when I released her, she trembled, and in her turn held on to the back of the chair.

"How dare you!" she panted. "How dare you? I will go this minute! You are not a gentleman!"

"That is it. I suppose," I said hoarsely. "I am not a gentleman underneath—the civilization is mere veneer, and the man breaks through it. I have nothing to say—I was mad, that is all. You will have to weigh up as to whether it is worth your while to stay with me or not. I cannot judge of that. I can only assure you that I will try not to err again. Perhaps some day you will know how you have been making me suffer lately. I shall go to my room now, and you can let me have your decision in an hour or so."

I could not move because my crutch had fallen to the floor out of my reach. She stood in indecision for a moment, and then she bent and picked it up and gave it to me. She was still as white as a ghost. As I got to the door I turned and said:

"I apologize for having lost my self-control. I am ashamed of that, and do not ask you to forgive me. Your staying or not is a business arrangement. I give you my word I will try never to be so weak again."

She was gazing at me. For once I had taken the wind out of her sails.

Then I bowed and hobbled on into my bedroom, shutting the door after me.

Here my courage deserted me. I got to the bed with difficulty and threw myself down upon it and my there, too filled with emotion to stir. The thought tormenting me always. Have I burnt my boats—or is this only the beginning of a new stage?

Time will tell.

I lay and wondered and wondered what were Alathea's emotions after I left her. Should I ever know? When the hour was up I went back into the sitting room. I had struggled against the awful depression which was overcoming me.

I suppose every man has committed some action he is sorry and ashamed of, forced thereto by some emotion, either of anger or desire, which has been too strong for his will to control.

This is the way murders must often have been committed, and other crimes—I had not the slightest intention of behaving like a cad—or of doing anything which I knew would probably part us forever. If my insult had been deliberate or planned, I would have held her longer, and knowing I was going to lose her by my action, I would have profited by it.

As I lay on my bed in great pain, from the wrench in getting there alone I tried to analyze things. The nervous excitement in which she always plunges me must have come to the culminating point. The only thing I was glad about was that I had not attempted to ask forgiveness, or to palliate my conduct.

If I had done so she would undoubtedly have walked straight out of the hotel—but having just had the sense to leave her to think for a while—perhaps—?

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—By ANN LISLE

"You're a wonderful judge of human nature," I said, with all the soberness usually attributed to judges.

"I fell down on it once," confessed Tom. "I didn't get that far now. I can't for the life of me figure out whether she is really in love with Booth, or whether—

"Tom," I interrupted gravely, "we owe it to Daisy Condon to believe that even if she has worked a bit—as men so often have a way of doing—she didn't marry for any but the one big reason. It isn't fair to her nor yet to Carl to suppose that anything but a big love drew them together. No one has a right to speculate about their motives or feelings. This marriage is their affair. The wrong attitude from outsiders is bound to—cheapen it. We mustn't do that. We mustn't concern ourselves——"

"With what's none of our business, eh, Donna Anna?"

"Precisely, Mr. Thomas Mason."

"Righto, little lady! We'll tend to our knitting. And if the ball is knotted up a bit, we'll work all the harder to unravel it and tie up the ravelled sleeve of care, or whatever it is the poet says."

"Agreed!" I cried. "So that means we enter upon an agreement not to discuss the Booth marriage again—ever."

"Yes."

Tom looked so crestfallen as he brought this out, that I could scarcely hold myself back from trying to comfort him. But all the "Mrs. Fix It" quality on which Jim has so often teased me, was gone from my attitude. I didn't propose to let my sympathy run away with me for Thomas Mason. If he is going to prove himself worthy of Irma Warren, he has a right to her. But if he hasn't the strength and the courage to atone for his previous mistakes, he won't be the right husband for that fine, sweet, old-fashioned girl.

Not for a moment do I suppose that Carl would deliberately say one word against another man for spiteful, personal reasons. On Daisy I don't feel it safe to bank. She may cherish a grudge against the one who scorned her love, even after she's happily married to another.

Carl's relationship to Loren Haldane will throw the Booths often into the company of Irma Warren. I believe that Irma is interested deeply and sincerely in Tom. How she'd feel toward a man who has in any way hurt another woman I don't know.

Sometimes a girl of her style can be very hard and unforgiving. But only the persons concerned have a right to judge of their feelings and their sense of values in a case of this sort. I have to mean, near enough to being worthy so you wouldn't feel called upon to array yourself against me?"

MOST human beings sleep on their sides. Elephants always, and horses commonly, sleep standing up, while birds, with the exception of owls and the hanging parrots of India, sleep with their heads over the back.

"Mary" ROMANCE OF A BOSTON BUSINESS GIRL

By Elenore Meherin

Start This Story Today

MARY KELLY wins the post of private secretary to HALL DAWSON, a dynamic promoter with offices in Water street. She instinctively fears him. After the conclusion of a big deal he calls her his mascot and gives her a check for $100, which she accepts with misgivings. Reassured by Dawson, however, she plunges into her work, dreaming of the day she will be his partner. Mary goes to see the parade of the returning Yankee Division and meets PAT SULLIVAN, her childhood sweetheart. JACK MAHONEY, a young millionaire, declares his love for her. Pat takes Mary riding and she realizes she loves him only. She receives a letter of proposal from Mahoney and answers it with a refusal. Pat has a row with Dawson. Mary sits for her portrait to Allan Bruce. Dawson insults her at his house and Mrs. Dawson orders her out. She receives a letter from Pat telling her he loves her. She gets a new job. Mary's mother dies and Allan performs many kind services. She loses her job and refuses to elope with Bruce.

I WANTED to laugh, to get out of the place, but didn't dare to move; even to raise my eyes—I couldn't answer Nell.

"What did you say, Mary? What made him look like that?"

"Nothing, nothing. I only asked him if he got my letter. Oh, Nell!"

I drank the water, repeating fervidly, "Just asked him if he got my letter. Please let me know if he got my letter! Not another word but that!"

"Mary, you must have done something or else he's crazy. What was in the letter?"

All that unashamed torrent of admissions—that letter rushing headlong with love for him, came back to me.

"I'm the crazy one, Nell. I let him see that I was wild about him; told him I waited only to hear from him; my heart and soul were his. I don't care."

"Why did you turn him down when he wanted to come? You were as cold as an icicle. I don't believe you could write even a half-warm love letter! You imagine it. There's something wrong in the whole affair. I'll find out about it."

"No, no! I never want to see him. He's done nothing but torture me ever since I first met him. I'm finished now. I'm glad it's over."

"It's not over, Mary; don't be obstinate. I'm going to make it my business to see that it isn't."

"Perhaps he heard something, Mary?"

"What about? What could he have heard, Nell?"

"Oh, I don't know. He might have heard some garbled account of that Alla.. Bruce affair."

"Allan Bruce affair!"

The dread that Nell knew; that it was common talk, filled me with a cowering, defenseless misery.

"What might he have heard, do you suppose, Nell?"

"Oh, things travel so. You never said a word to me and yet I heard it."

"That's funny," I said coolly. "I didn't think there was anything to tell. Did Allan mention it to you?"

"Of course, he didn't tell. She did."

"She! Who do you mean?"

"Don't be silly, Mary! His wife, of course. She told it to Ida Gage. Ida told it to me. Perhaps she told it to Teresa. If she did, you can be sure Pat got a prettily decorated account."

"This is a choice mystery, Nell," I said breezily, but my breath rasped in a harsh pain. "What did Ida Gage tell you?"

"Oh, about ruining your picture. I threw you a hint of it the other day, but you wouldn't take it up. That's why he wouldn't sell the picture. He couldn't. You knew it, but you wouldn't come through."

"The picture's not ruined, Nell."

"What is there in that to talk about? Didn't you tell me yourself that his wife trailed him, that she made his life a torment to him?"

"Everybody knows that, Mary, but she told a pretty story to Ida about being willing to take him back and going up there and seeing that picture of you. She found out your name and said you were his latest adventure and had stolen his affections from her. I know what a devil she was to him, and so does every one in town, but that doesn't hurt the gossip any. Pat knows nothing of Allan or her. His might have heard a well spiced version of the affair. You couldn't blame him if it made a difference, could you?"

If Teresa Brady heard that tale, she had told it to Pat. He would couple it with what he had seen at the studio, and at Hall Dawson's. His vivid, impulsive nature would ask no further proof. He would believe it was what I had seemed.

He was lost to me.

He had heard tales about me that he could not choose but believe. I had lied to him. That letter I wrote was to him nothing but the most shameless lie. I had won his love only to outrage it.

As I thought it rushed up and down the room, pressing my hands together. Oh, it was easy to forfeit his love compared to this hot, overwhelming anguish of loving as well his respect.

"No, I can't, just go. Tell him what I said." I was pushing her to the door.

He might think ill of me, but from my own lips he would never know that his thoughts were justified.

There was a knock at the door. Auntie Fillmore poked her head into the room.

"Are you here, Mary?" she asked in her cheery, pugnacious voice. "There's a strange young man downstairs to see you. Go now, and have a good time while you're young. I like the look of him."

"The sins of you tonight, Mary! What's the matter with you?" She went out talking in her quick, hoarse way.

"What might he have heard, do you suppose, Nell?"

No power now would force me to meet him . . . to put myself under the sway of that rich, exquisite voice; to see again the contempt in the eyes that had once been tender, adoring; to feel his own brown hands holding mine . . .

"It's Pat," she said. Auntie Fillmore was back again. "And it's very important. He has to see you. Go down now, and no more nonsense."

The door op ned again.

"There!" Auntie Fillmore called, "now tell him yourself!" She stood aside, shook her curly white hair at me, and pushed Pat into the room.

"Mary!" He opened his hands, took a quick step toward me. Something yellow—a telegram was in his clasp. "Mary, don't send me from you. Just tell me—what does this mean?"

"Why did you send it, Mary? What does it mean?" He was smoothing out the telegram, offering it to me, his vivid questioning eyes on mine, his thin, tanned face struck with pain.

"Won't you speak to me, Mary?"

"Nothing to say, Mary? Why did you send this message then and after that other thing?"

"That other thing!" The phrase smote like a blow. He had heard it. Teresa had told him of Allan Bruce.

"Oh, stop! I can't bear any more. Go, please.

"I've hurt you, Mary! What did I do?"

"Oh, what did you do!" Half hidden by the curtain, I pressed my face against the window. And then he came over, slipping his arm about my waist, holding my hand.

"How did I hurt you, Mary? What did I do to you? Tell me."

With the little force I had I tried to repel him.

"Won't you please go, Pat? There isn't anything I can say. I don't want to talk to you. Leave me alone. I can't tell you anything. . . ."

"Oh, yes you can, Mary, and you're going to. Tell me only that you care for me a little now—just that. Tell me it." His arms were around me, his head bent to mine. "Ah, my heart's love, don't send me from you again."

"You might as well go, Pat—oh, what could you want of me now?" And suddenly sobs broke in my throat and I covered my face so that he could not see the tears.

"Oh, God, don't cry any more, Mary!" His arms folded me softly, he tried to take my hands from my face. "Don't cry, little pal. Tell me what you meant by this last telegram."

"You said at noon that you got it. I sent it weeks and weeks ago. Why are you here now? Did you just come to make it harder for me?"

"Don't you believe me, Mary?" he asked then quietly. "I just received it. I left New York two weeks before the message came. I've been a month traveling. It was forwarded to me there. When you spoke about the telegram at noon I thought you meant that other thing—the terrible, cruel thing you sent me in the beginning, the first one."

"There was only one—the one you have in your hands, the one that asked you if you got my letter."

"Only one? But you got the wires I sent you?"

"I got nothing—nothing but the letter written that night before you left."

"Who sent the answer then? Who sent that first telegram?

"Who sent it if you didn't Mary? Who has a right to speak for you; to open telegrams sent to you?" Suddenly he gripped my hands. "Answer me that, Mary! Who sent the message?"

"You never sent any telegrams to me."

"I did. I sent you one giving you my address, asking you to let me have some word, begging you to answer my letter. I sent another from Omaha asking only if you cared for me.

"And then you sent me this." He reached in his pocket and brought out a crumpled yellow slip. "Read Mary. That came from your office and I paid the charges on it. That's the telegram I thought you meant when you spoke of it at lunch."

He handed it to me. The letters danced before my eyes.

"Believe what you saw that night. Don't send any more wires to me. I'm finished with you.

"(Signed) Mary Kelly."

With a Boston broadcasting war ushered by an inch, the finally accepted schedule for the operation of the four stations was made public today. The schedule becomes effective October 16.

The schedule represents an earnest effort on the part of Radio Inspector Charles C. Kolster to please everyone. In its final form, the hours are equitably divided between the stations, and it is arranged so that the early and late hours are varied from day to day.

The demand of various fans for "open" hours when they could tune it to distant stations has been met, according to Kolster, by the time allotted to the less powerful stations, WAAJ and WFAU, when those with good sets may listen in to more distant stations.

When the new station of the Bonneville Radio Laboratory is opened it will be allotted an hour with one of the other two less powerful stations.

Answers to Radio Fans

J. W. S., Everett.—The question of renugnetizing the poles of a pair of phones depends on their design and whether the cores may be removed without unwinding the coils. It would be better to buy new phones, as the fact that they have become demagnetized shows that a poor grade of steel was used in their construction.

W. G. F., Versailles, Ct.—The design of your detector and three-stage amplifier is excellent, and I see no reason why three stages should not be louder than two unless there is a defect in the parts themselves. You might consider the following suggestions, however. You do not need both a variometer in the grid circuit and a variable condenser across the secondary of the coupling. The variometer alone is enough to tune the grid circuit with. Since you have two types of transformers, I should re-arrange them so that two of the same type are not side by side. For use with a loud speaker, you would get greater amplification if you put a power tube (UV 202, for example) with plenty of B battery, in place of the last tube. Finally, you will have better results if you use one-stage of RF amplification and two of AF.

R. B. M., Dorchester—A variometer in place of a two-slide tuning coil would improve your set what, but a vario-coupler would be somewhat, but a vario-coupler would be even better. The reason WGI doesn't come in louder is probably the result of the directional effect of your aerial. An inverted "L" aerial should have the free and pointed in direction of the station to be received.

A well-dressed man was sitting on a seat in the park, and nearby, on the grass, sat a boy.

"Why don't you go and play with the other boys," asked the man.

"Oh, I am just waiting to see," answered the boy.

"To see what?"

"You, when you get up," replied the boy. "That seat was painted this morning."

The little boy in this story was evidently a firm believer in the old adage, "Of two evils choose the less." Turning a corner at full speed, he collided with the minister.

"Where are you running to, my little man?" asked the minister, when he had regained his breath.

"Home!" panted the boy. "Ma's going to spank me."

"What!" gasped the astonished minister. "Are you so eager to have your mother spank you that you run home so fast?"

"No," shouted the boy over his shoulder, as he resumed his homeward flight, "but if I don't get there before pa, he'll do it!"

DAILY DRESS PATTERN

Be sure to give size when ordering. Please use care in making name and address legible. A new style book containing 600 illustrations will be sent on receipt of 10 cents. Write Pattern Dept., Boston American, 80 Summer street, Boston, 2, Mass.

A PRETTY DRESS FOR MANY OCCASIONS

4103-4049. This style may be developed as a dinner dress or for afternoon wear. As illustrated, printed foulard was used, with bead trimmings, and facings of Canton crepe on the skirt. The skirt could be of Canton crepe in one color, and the blouse of the new printed Oriental silks, or of figured georgette or crepe.

The blouse 4103 is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. The skirt in 7 sizes: 25, 27, 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37 inches waist measure. To make this model for a medium size will require 6 yards of 40-inch material, with 1¼ yards of 18-inch material to face the cascades. The width of the skirt at the foot without overlapping portion is 2¼ yards.

What Else?

"Do you think women should propose?" asked the elderly lady. "I don't know," mused the young maid. "Have you tried everything else?"

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

"If Rothschild greatly increased his fortune by buying French bonds when the streets of Paris were running with blood, wouldn't he, if he were alive today, buy German bonds at their present extremely low prices in foreign money?"

A reader asks this question.

I don't know what Rothschild would do. I know that all along I have been sounding warnings against buying German marks. These warnings were started when the mark was worth many times what it is now quoted.

As for German bonds. I have not thought of putting any of my money into them. Maybe that is because I'm rather a conservative sort of fellow—at least in investment matters. Even were I a speculator, I wouldn't touch German marks, and I very much doubt whether I would care to put any of my savings into German government bonds.

I rather believe, however, that there are wonderful opportunities in the way of acquiring an interest in certain German enterprises. As a matter-of-fact, I know that some keen-minded Americans have been putting money into German properties. But they investigated before they invested. They went into these things with their eyes open. They knew what they were doing. They looked things over on the spot.

For the ordinary person, with a few thousand dollars to invest, it would be safer to buy something at home; something less speculative, something he could get full information about.

* * *

Look in your wallet and if you are foolish enough to carry around any considerable sum, you will probably find one or two "yellow backs," that is, gold certificates. Until now these had been completely out of circulation several years. The banks grabbed hold of every one which came their way. These "yellow backs" count the same as gold in bank reserves. This putting of them into circulation means that the banks are anxious to reduce their stocks of gold.

* * *

Isn't the time coming when there will be a perfectly legitimate expansion in the monetary needs of our own business world? And is it not entirely conceivable that things will by and by so change that bankers and investors in this country will feel warranted in investing extensively in foreign securities?

When that day comes, it would tend to minimize interference with prosperity here were the demands met without causing undue tightening of our own money market by the severe putting down of our bank reserves.

One is reminded of John D. Rockefeller's retort when a visitor assured Mr. Rockefeller that he would be warm enough in the Autumn without putting on the paper vest, Mr. Rockefeller had procured for him. Said Mr. Rockefeller: "Take it; take it. A surplus never hurts."

N. J. STANDARD, U. S. STEEL AT YEAR'S HIGHS

Marine preferred opened off in the New York week-end market as a result of Attorney-General Daugherty's dry ships ruling, against transportation of liquor on ships entering American ports. The sag was 1⅛ on the initial sale. The big marine rallied to 62⅝, then reacted a bit.

Oils were the most active issues in a spotty market, but U. S. Steel was not neglected, the bulls having an eye to next Tuesday's expected favorable tonnage report.

STEEL SETS HIGH.

U. S. Steel at 106½ established a new high for 1922. Fisher Body made a new year's high, up 3 at 137.

Standard Oil of New Jersey set a fresh top for the year, up 7 at 228⅜. Standard Oil of California was up 2½ at 132½.

Doheny Oils were also very active. Mexican Pete lifted 4⅛ at 184⅜ and Pan-American 1⅞ at 78⅝.

Southern Railway issues suddenly snapped into lively overturns. The preferred quickly set a new year's high, up 2⅞ at 66⅞, and the common 1⅜ higher at 27⅛.

DROPS 45 POINTS.

Air Reduction was lifted 1½ points to a new high record and gains of 1 to 2 or more points were made by Gulf States Steel, Coca Cola and National Biscuit.

Coppers were weak, Utah receding 1½ points and Anaconda yielding fractionally. Losses of a point or more also took place in American Telephone, Houston Oil and Norfolk & Western.

NATIONAL BISCUIT MYSTERY STOCK

Comment has already been made on the narrowness of the market in National Biscuit, the new mystery stock. A floor trader had 1,000 shares of it to buy at the market at opening time, the other day. He got his first lot at 190 and the next offer was 194. He telephoned that a proper execution was impossible, but was told to get the stock. It took a considerable display of trading ability to get his thousand shares between 190 and 200.

It is whispered that there is a "situation" in the company. A stock dividend is said to have been the first plan, but the management, according to the story, could not get hold of sufficient preferred to assure a favorable vote—the preferred has voting power.

Result, a complete revamping of the capitalization, with possible issue of new stock, is whispered, although how the vote obstacle can thus be surmounted is not clear.

R. H. MACY & CO.'S FALL TRADE LARGE

At annual meeting of R. H. Macy & Co. in New York President Straus said: "In the past year conditions with us have been very favorable in point of sales, which have kept pace with growth of city. Fall business is keeping ahead of Fall business in 1921, which was a record year. Company has been somewhat hampered by construction of addition. Present store was planned to accommodate a business of $25,000,000 annually and we are now doing approximately $49,000,000. Employes have oversubscribed stock offered them."

MOON MOTORS UP ON TALK OF EXTRA

Moon Motors changed hands within a fraction of its previous high. The street is just learning that the holdings of a big estate have been gradually absorbed. Those close to Moon management believe dividend of $1 a share annually may be enlarged to $2 in the near future. It may be that the directors will decide to maintain the present regular dividend of the same amount.

BANK CLEARINGS UP 15 P. C. IN WEEK

Dun's weekly compilation of bank clearings show an aggregate of $7,411,757,000, an increase of 15.2 per cent. over last year. Outside of New York there was an increase of 15.1 per cent. over a year ago.

NEW YORK CENTRAL MERGER ATTACKED

Legality of New York Central-Lake Shore & Michigan Southern combination is attacked in United States Supreme Court by General Investment Co. of Maine as violation of anti-trust in that it merged competing and parallel lines.

RADIO CORPORATION BUYS BIG BUILDING

Tin Mines Reopen

Ottawa Seeks Bids

Dividend Declarations

S. H. Kress & Co. declared quarterly 1 per cent. common dividend, payable Nov. 1, stock of record Oct. 20.

STATE ST. NOTES

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—Continue to watch for opportunities to buy the individual stocks that we want when they have special reaction.

BOOTH FISHERIES has reduced bank borrowings from more than $8,000,000 to $6,300,000. With salmon market up, Booth appears to be in for a season of real prosperity.

EASTERN MASSACHUSETTS Street Railway dividend-payers are still selling well under what many consider figures in line with their investment values.

UTAH COPPER is still feeling the labor shortage, with several hundred more workers needed.

WALTHAM WATCH ought to be selling higher, if it is true that the market discounts future business, and also that stockholders have faith in the business energy now being displayed at the big plant.

NEW IDRIA QUICKSILVER Mining Company sale will be considered by Judge Anderson in U. S. District Court October 9.

AMOSKEAG Manufacturing Company, with 57 cents a share earned common last year, has margin of profit smallest in a decade, but it should be noted fiscal year ended [illegible] 31, while strike began in February.

LOEWS, INC., is not expected to act on dividends until late in year. Directors meet at postponed session next Wednesday.

PUNTA ALEGRE Sugar's annual report will not be available for a month or two. Last year it was issued early in October.

ATCHISON'S rally of more than 2 points from its day's low Friday was typical of the strength of this standard investment issue.

ISLAND OIL exported 141,000 barrels oil from Mexico in September, 95,000 less than in August. Swiftsure, controlled by Old Colony Trust Company of Boston, shipped 284,000 barrels, 50,000 less.

MERGENTHALER SETS NEW TOP FOR 1922

Mergenthaler Linotype set a new top for 1922 in the week-end trading on the Boston Stock Exchange, up 2 at 176. The market as a whole was irregular with a firm undertone, recessions being due to profit-taking.

In the packing group Swift & Co. shaded ½ at 108½ and Swift International ¼ at 23. National Leather was ¼ higher at 9⅞.

Fractional gains came out as follows: Boston Elevated, ¼ at 86¼; Massachusetts Gas, ½ at 88; Ventura Oil, ¼ at 28⅜; Carson Hill Gold, ¼ at 8⅜; Pacific Mills, ½ at 157; and Edison, ¼ at 180.

Oil production in Toteco pool totaled 71,000 barrels in 24 hours, ended 7 a. m., October 6. Gulf Oil produced 32,000 barrels, Mexican Petroleum 25,000, and Mexican Seaboard 14,000.

Saugus School Bonds

Saugus will receive bids until 8 p. m., October 16, for $50,000 of 4 per cent. coupon schoolhouse loan bonds, dated May 1, 1922, and payable in each of years 1923 to 1942 inclusive.

STANDARD OILS' MOVE TO STIR TRADE FEVER

Second big stock dividend by one of the important Standard Oil subsidiaries can hardly help but inflame the speculative fever the country over, for it is proof positive that those big industrials that have for years been husbanding surplus now feel it discreet to capitalize them and to seek public investment partnership. It marks a distinct era in corporate finance just as did the industrial consolidation movement of the late nineties.

The confidence on the part of the most powerful industrial and financial group in the United States, thus displayed at this time, is certain to impress business men and is almost sure to result in similar liberal action by other corporations before many months have elapsed. A series of stock dividends for the next year would appear to be in the making.

Thus, though oil securities may be favored or exploited at the moment, other classes will later come in for attention. Tobaccos and equipments could logically act similarly, especially the latter, since their extraordinary war prosperity was carefully husbanded.

The volume of business is satisfactory in both manufacturing and [illegible] stances the margin of profit is not [illegible], compared with normal pre-war figures, there is little reason for complaint. The big and efficient companies have little of which to complain.

Production is very big and even in an industry, such as the automotive, in which over-capacity is popularly supposed to exist, expansion has been found necessary. There is no oversupply of goods and little is needed to produce before the Spring a buying movement of goods similar to the appetite which now exists for stocks.

Baldwin Loco Order

German Freight Rates

Germany has increased railway freight rates, effective December 1, 50 per cent. in addition to 100 per cent. increase November 1.

Replies to Investors

Queries of interest to investors will be answered in this column or by mail. Address questions, with stamped and self-addressed envelope, to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Sign Your Inquiries.

To W. H. R., North Attleboro.—I would gladly reply to your letter, but it is an invariable rule that all inquiries must be signed with name and stamped and self-addressed envelope enclosed as evidence of good faith. If you will send your inquiry in this manner, you will get a speedy answer.

Texas Pacific Coal & Oil.

To T. S. D., Back Bay.—Texas Pacific Coal & Oil appears fairly safe at this time, if you can afford to speculate. Condensed analysis shows: Management satisfactory. Financial position good. Outstanding 844,804 shares, $10 par value. No bonds. Only one class of stock. Asset value $36 a share. Current assets $5,979,203, including $1,259,931 cash, $2,133,000 accounts receivable, $2,527,000 inventory. Current liabilities $2,148,305, consisting of accounts and notes payable. Working capital $3,830,898. Surplus, $22,345,000. Reserve, $4,785,954. Dividend $1 annual.

Pacific Tel. & Tel. 1st 5s.

To F. G. G., Marlboro st.—I see no reason for selling your Pacific Telephone & Telegraph 1st 5s. The exchanges and toll lines of Pacific Telephone & Telegraph subsidiaries extend through the Pacific Coast States and Idaho. The first and collateral 5s, 1927, outstanding in the amount of $32,442,000, are an absolute first lien on former property of Pacific States in city and county of San Francisco. They are also a first lien in effect on all other properties of that concern and other companies through the territory served, through pledge of first mortgage 6 per cent. demand notes. They are a lien on properties formerly owned by Home Telephone, and are additionally secured by Pacific States and Sunset stock, issued in $1,000 denomination only, they yield 5.45 per cent. Interest January and July.

Burns Brothers—

To A. W. E., Winchester.—Difference between two class of Burns Brothers Coal Company, stock is this: Class "A" common receives cumulative dividends of $8 a share and also shares ratably in any dividends paid on Class "B" common. An increase in dividends on the two classes would have a proportionately greater effect on the "B" stock, and it is therefore believed to discount larger dividends at its high price. In the year ended March 31, 1922, the company earned $9.49 on its "A" stock and $7.49 on its "B" stock; for eight years preceding that it averaged 10.85 per cent. on its old common stock.

50,000-Barrel Well Is Brought in for Mexican Pete

Mexican Petroleum completed its Chapapote Nunez No. 5 well for 50,000 barrels at 2,009 feet subsea level. This is the shallowest well in the district, 49 feet shallower than Chapapote No. 2, one kilometer to the southeast, and 41 feet shallower than Tierra Blanca No. 1, one kilometer northwest.

It indicates a pool not less than two kilometers in extent, with boundaries unknown, and gives Mexican Petroleum increased proved reserve.

BRADSTREET'S SEES GROWTH OF BUSINESS

Bradstreet's weekly review says: "Trade and industrial conditions continue generally favorable, restrictive features noted having to do mainly with superabundance of traffic of all kinds offered the country's transportation interests.

"Further growth in the Fall jobbing trade, with a little more confidence in placing business in the near future sure to go to retail trade later despite unusually warm weather, a better pace to industry, except where car shortages prevent free movement of raw materials to markets or finished goods to consumers, and slightly better collections, stamp the situation as superior to that of early Summer, and therefore the best for over two years past.

"The early compiled measures of September movement generally agree in showing the marked resiliency of trade and industry now that the fuel and rail strikes are out of the way.

HOW STOCKHOLDERS IN KRESGE FARED

Sales of S. S. Kresge Co., in current year, are expected to reach $63,000,000, against $55,000,000 in 1921. By December 31 the company will have added sixteen new stores to its chain, making total number of stores in operation 212. Expansion of the company has been financed entirely out of earnings. Despite carrying out of development program, stockholders have fared well. Holders of common stock since 1912 have received 45.5 per cent. in cash and 134 per cent. in stock, averaging 4.55 per cent. in cash and 13.4 per cent. in stock each year, or combined average of 17.95 per cent.

VERDE EXTENSION'S OUTPUT INCREASES

BROKERS' VIEWS OF MARKET FOR WEEK

The series of feverish and exciting sessions which appear to lie just ahead of us may be brief or protracted. One man's guess is as good as another's on that point. But if a majority of the various groups of stocks are to be brought enticingly forward after the manner of the domestic oils this week, a good many days may be necessary and no important reaction may be staged until next month.—Tucker, Anthony & Co.

IMPROVEMENT SEEN.

General business conditions appear for the most part to be improving. The car shortages, which are being reported, show that the industries of the country are becoming increasingly active, although this same lack of rolling stock leads to some apprehension as to its effect on business if such situation should become acute during the coming months.

The railroad reports for August have not been favorable, but this was to have been looked for on account of the shopmen's strike, and the figures for the months to follow are expected to make a much better showing.—Elmer H. Bright & Co.

There is, in short, still a certain measure of inflation—of artificiality—about this prosperity, though much less, we are glad to think, than during the period of 1919 and 1920.

The stock market has now enjoyed fourteen months of rising prices; all the signs indicate that we are entering on the final stage. This stage is likely to last several months, and during it we shall probably see quite a number of issues enjoy a substantial advance. While it is well enough to go along with the current, it is also advisable not to become so heavily laden down that one cannot easily step aside when we seem to be approaching the falls.—Hayden, Stone & Co.

RAILS INTERESTING

The present position of the rails is interesting to students of the market. Their action has at all times been more orderly than that of the industrials. Hence their technical position is decidedly stronger and the likelihood of a sharp reaction less.

The glamour which attached to the industrials in the war markets has held over to a certain extent until the present time.

Thus we see the common stocks of many industrials which were badly crippled by the recent period of deflation and are even now earning little selling for two or three times the price of some of the rails like Pere Marquette, St. Louis Southwestern, St. Louis-San Francisco, which are in sound condition and earning from $6 to $10 per share. This discrepancy will doubtless be corrected in the later stages of this bull market.—F. L. Milliken & Co.

PRICE TREND HIGHER IN GRAIN MARKET

Trend of week-end prices was higher in the Chicago pit. Wheat sold ¼ to ⅝ higher; corn, ¼c higher; oats, ⅛ to ¼ higher. Wheat—December, 1.06⅝ to 1.06⅞; May, 1.08⅞ to 1.08¾; July, 1.01¾. Corn—December, 61⅛ to 61¼; May, 63¼; July, 63⅝.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

PRINCE & WHITELY—Purchase the rails especially. Prices cannot much longer ignore tremendous business carriers are handling.

THOMSON & McKINNON—Except for doubt as to outcome of Eastern difficulties, indications point to a continuation of the advance.

J. S. BACHE & CO.—We still hear of excellent buying in Western Pacific issues.

TRANSCONTINENTAL OIL officials declare there is no truth in current reports that Transcontinental will take over the Colombia sydicate.

PACIFIC GAS & Electric, with increased earnings, is being talked of for dividend increases in next quarter. It now pays $5 a year.

KELLY-SPRINGFIELD, while in good treasury position and earning well, is declared not to be up to $7 a share earnings, as stated in some quarters.

BALTIMORE & OHIO'S non-payment of common dividend this year also means road must refinance practically $136,000,000 of 3½ per cent. bonds in 1925 on basis of new bonds not legal for savings in New York.

READING'S report for 1922 will probably show little effect of either railroad or coal strikes on income of parent company. For two years it has drawn nothing from coal company.

DOME MINES gold production in September was 423,059, against $452,774 in August and $335,254 in July. Mill handled 31,304 tons, against 33,000 in August.

ROCK ISLAND'S August earnings furnish clew to why pool abandoned further objectives and sold a lot of stock. Gross showed a shrinkage of 17.7 per cent., just about half of what it was in August, 1921.

GERMAN-AMERICAN Petroleum Co., branch of Standard Oil of New Jersey, reports for 1921 net profits of 2,730,000,000 marks, against 2,390,000,000 in 1920.

H. R. MALLINSON & CO. estimated earnings for current fiscal year will be more than double 1921 showing. Current earnings are estimated at rate equal to nine times dividend on $2,700,000 outstanding preferred, leaving $6 a share on 200,000 common.

REAL ESTATE HAPPENINGS

The three apartment stores and brick dwelling house at No. 1418 Beacon street, Brookline, has been conveyed by William M. Ambler to Anna P. Smith who buys for home and investment. The total assessment is $30,600, of which $4,600 is on the 4,184 square feet of land. The office of Frederick A. Leavitt and Henry A. Burnham negotiated the sale.

The Jamaica Real Estate Exchange reports the sale of the six-tenement house on No. 562 Massachusetts avenue, near the corner of Columbus avenue, Boston, to Joseph Blanchard. The total assessment is $8,700, including the 1,707 feet of land. The property is to be remodeled and the first floor converted into a store. Bessie Rae was the grantor.

J. S. Blanchard of the same office reports the sale of the single house, located at the corner of Poplar and Heathcote streets, Roxbury, by John H. Brennan of Nantasket, who buys for occupancy. The property, which contains about 6,000 square feet of land, is assessed for $4,500. Rufus West was the grantor.

BOYLSTON STREET LEASE

The Allen Hall Building, Incorporated, has leased to David Gorfinkle and Samuel Barkin, for a long term of years, the property at Nos. 384-390 Boylston street, running through to Providence street. The land area comprises 4,166 square feet. The new leases will either substantially alter the present buildings or erect a new structure on the property. Whitcomb and Company negotiated the transaction.

NEWTON RESIDENCES SOLD

The attractive Newton residence of John D. Bogart, now corner and colonial of Lin Brockton Times, has been sold to William H. Newcombe, title being given by Jessie A. Bogart. The property, which is located at No. 634 Commonwealth avenue, consists of twelve rooms, two baths, two-car garage and about 10,000 square feet of land. The assessed valuation is $12,500, but the consideration is understood to have been greatly in excess of that figure. Henderson & Ross were the brokers.

The estate of William Ireland has conveyed title to Rev. Francis L. Cooper, of the single frame dwelling on Ist No. 13, Eastbourne road, Newton Centre. The total valuation of 13,000 includes 7,500 square feet of land. Henderson & Ross negotiated the sale.

WINCHESTER AUCTION SALE

The estate of the late N. H. Road, at No. 107 Church street, Winchester, will be sold at auction on the premises next Thursday, October 19, under the direction of C. L. Byrens, auctioneer, of No. 43 Tremont street, Boston. Both the real estate and the house furnishings will be auctioned off.

The real property, which is assessed at $20,000, includes a two and one-half story modern twelve-room gray stucco house with two-car garage and 15,500 square feet of land. This property is one of the finest of its size in Winchester and undoubtedly will assert a large gathering of those interested.

The personal property, including a number of fine oriental rugs, beautiful old mahogany, Queen Anne and other furnishings of a luxuriously appointed home, will be sold in separate lots. The house is now open for inspection. Refreshments will be served on the day of the sale.

Roaches Are Dangerous

Today while every one is deeply engrossed in the war scramble to make money, roaches and rats and vermin thrive and multiply unnoticed. For instance, few people stop to realize that the source of almost every epidemic that ravages the country is traceable to vermin. Rats and mice have been known to cause a thousand times the damage done by fire, yet they are comparatively unnoticed. Who gives any thought at the present time that are seriously invading our homes? Not one in 10,000 will answer. Yet for the low price of $10 and guarantees as high as 6 and $1.00 per rat, 50c and $1.50 to kill. Mail orders must be accompanied by money order or cash.
